Brothers and Sisters!

This publication is for a few - and that's a fact. It would be foolish, if not even irrational, of me to let myself believe anything else. People don't care to think and that, if anything, is more than easy to recognize in today's society and its pathetic condition. To make matters even worse, the kind of realistic and natural thought patterns this publication aims to promote and propagate have been banned as "evil" by the modern society and the blind parasites following it.

What you're about to read in this issue as well as in the future issues of I RETURN TO DARKNESS concern real values of life - such as wisdom, power, strenght, pride, honour, loyalty, courage - the very same attributes so astonishingly lost these days. I RETURN TO DARKNESS speaks of these long forgotten values and stands vehemently against the materialistic and oversocialistic nerds we are sadly confronted with in life today - fools, who live in the moment, eyes heavily and steadily shut from reality, never really opening anything to question, but rather taking everything for granted. This publication really is for a few, but still, in my most optimistic visions, I dare to dream of a larger group of individuals, fully capable of comprehending the truth that lies here within these pages. Time shall tell, as usual.

The Northwind Manifesto is without a shadow of a doubt the most significant part of this issue. Even if it's considerably brief, I still have managed to lay out unsparingly the unsparing truth about the now prevailing social system, pinpoint its numerous drawbacks, place particular stress on the relevence of nature and its laws, destroy Christianity in all aspects and substantiate the position of constant self-development as a key to higher level of existence. The secrets of human supremacy have been unveiled. Don't miss it.

As for the interviews in this 6th issue, I have chosen to discuss things with some of the more "well-known" individuals. There are two reasons behind it. Firstly, and simply, this is because of the grim and fascinating nature of the interviewees. All different, yet, all the same. Secondly, and obviously, none of the featured individuals have ever been interviewed quite this thoroughly in the past. True, you might have seen a lot of "band-interviews" answered by these individuals since all of them are involved in some highly respected music groups, but no editor has ever cared, or alternatively, dared to unveil what really lies behind the shadows of them. I did. I RETURN TO DARKNESS doesn't restrict its subject matter to anything. Life is the question. Death is the answer. Whereas all the other magazines and fanzines lay their conceptional emphasis on some certain theme, be it then music or history or whatever, this publication goes far beyond all the set up boundaries into the vast wastelands of life & death and all in between, yet promoting and propagating the aforementioned real values to an utterly great extent. The interviews are made as soulportraits, providing the reader an extensive and profound look right into the soul of the interviewee. Nothing less accepted.

Still, I feel it a necessity to emphasize that I RETURN TO DARKNESS has absolutely nothing to do with any of this pathetic Black Metal "scene", which is and has been infected for several years now by unserious and incompetent bunch of loudmouthed sad tossers who do nothing but raise swords in photos and scream Satan in letters. I wish not to associate with such scum. Apart from my personal contact with some of the more intelligent Black Metal people and my liking of some Black Metal music, I and my journalistic endeavours have nothing at all to do with the "scene" anymore. There you have it loud 'n' clear. Period.

My heart and soul are in these pages. Forever.

In the Name of the Truth,

The Northwind Manifesto

Nature is the source of all life. It is the beginning. It is the end. It is the foundation where it all springs from. It is a beautifully automatic entity constantly striving for maintaining balance in the face of the earth. It is a vital necessity for any living organism. Still, bearing all this in mind as the obvious, it is amazing how few of us truly are able to face the facts. What man does to nature, man does for himself. Very simple, yet, very true. Face the overpopulation - nature just cannot put up with it much longer. And it is not just your food and water that will be in no time out of stock. Masses are walking blindly behind every new technological invention that is hitting the market, not realizing the very product and the industry it requires are in the long run yet another considerably big contributors to the destruction of the whole planet. Technology in itself, together with contemporary science, ought to be wiped out as they do nothing but enlighten the lives of the blind with mundane entertainment. Technology, with the Internet as its latest thrill, is aiming quite accurately at subjecting the consumer to the feelings of inferiority and addiction: "Machines do it quicker and better" could be the slogan here. By machinizing everything humans are trying to make things more "easy" for themselves. The inventions might come handy for the time being, true, but do remember: it is nature that is supplying the raw materials and, hey, nothing lasts forever. Yet, still, they keep closing their eyes. Engraved in materialistic comfort mankind is constantly sowing the seed of its own destruction.

However, things were not always this degenerated. Once upon time the earth was inhabited by strong and delightfully natural civilizations: the Vikings, the Incas, the Indians, the Aztecs, the Mayas, the Slavs, the Celts, to mention just a few of these great tribes. Surely the differences were notably enormous even between those listed here, and surely several contradictions to the claim declared herein can be found, but primarily all these once proud civilizations respected nature and truly followed its laws in the most strict sense of the word, thus maintaining the necessary natural balance . They had their own mythologies and beliefs, but mostly the gods and goddesses they so dearly cherished were, indeed, but natural forces. These entities were not based upon "good" and "evil", like Christianity, definitely no, they were based upon different aspects of human behaviour and natural elements. Whereas one god served as the god of hate, another one appeared as the god of love. Whereas one god served as the god of thunder, another one appeared as the god of sea. This kind of natural religion with natural gods was healthy for mind and soul if we are to compare it to destructive monotheistic religions such as Christianity where one single male entity is ruling above the clouds by enslaving all His followers. Nature was earlier on hold sacred and this was notably appearant in the healthy lifestyles the ancient civilizations possessed. It is, indeed, arguable whether or whether not this worship of natural elements, such as the sun or the moon, derived straighly from plain ignorance over these forces and their essences, but no matter what the result of the argument thereof is, it still is uncompromisingly obvious this kind of nature-bonded lifestyle was all the way more spirited, balanced and harmonic than the one we face today in the modern Christian society.

Though yet these early civilizations were to fall. Some fell for their own incompetence, true, but mostly the death of several cultures, mythologies and races was aided by Christianity, at least here in the Western part of the world. The Christian crusades in Europe, for instance, ought to be branded more properly as "executions" rather than "crusades". Everything was destroyed and those brave heathens who chose not to take in the Jewish belief with open arms were executed in the name of the oh so almighty and merciful God. Everything our forefathers held dear was systematically destroyed, let it be said once again. This whole natural world our people carried inside the hearts was suddenly of pure "evil", according to the Christians. What we face here is the biggest injustice that has ever occured on earth. People who determinatedly clang on to their natural beliefs were out of the blue called "pagans" by the same Christians who at this point, without wasting any time, started building up their ridiculous churches on the top of our forefathers' holy sites. The natural symbols were buried and the Jewish symbols gained more ground. This point of history was not only the end of something once so majestic, it was also the beginning of physical as well as psychical decline of man. Christianity was the first to practice senseless abuse of nature on our soil, and this, one ought never to forget or forgive. Nature was since then looked upon as "evil" and as something man can remorselessly exploit and rape for his own benefit and means. Look where we are today and what was the result of practicing this disrespect for nature these Christians taught us: the increasing contamination, the reduction of ozone layer, the extension of deserts, the global heatening, the extinction of wild life, the general pollution and the destruction of forests & waters - anyone?

In other words, these "harmless" and "innocent" Christians are, indeed, responsible for slaying our forefathers, taking our lands and destroying our natural culture. However, the most resultative operation of Christian insanity was the exhange of values and morals. The sword was no longer the law, so to say. Values such as wisdom, power, strenght, courage, bravery, honesty, loyalty, dignity, honour and pride where now of what they label as "evil", or better yet, some of these values even came to serve as the "seven sins of death". They had to be replaced by Christian values such as mercy, charity, humbleness, chastity, altruism, forgiveness, modesty, powerlessness, cowardice and prudishness. These are all values that lead anyone following them enslaved and humiliated on the edge of spiritual death. Given this, it is with utmost sorrow I have to say these very same values are the basis of our social norms today. After invading our lands these spiritual Jews were quick enough to strenghten their force and as a result of this, the society we today are enforced to live in was born. The constitution and the laws are all based upon the aforementioned Christian values and morals, resulting that anyone acting today naturally and truthfully will sooner or later have to do time behind bars. Take killing for instance. It is, indeed, natural to kill. Every animal kills and so does humans when needed one way or another, but since it says in the pathetic lawbooks of these parasites that killing is "wrong", they will lock you up for decades just because you were following one of your natural instincts. A question inevitably bumping into mind at this point is that if killing is so "wrong" according to these parasitic sheeps, what gave them the right to butcher our forefathers with the kind of "believe or die" mentality? And how can a religion that has on several events broken down its own rules, form the rules for any society? People today are such hypocrites. There is very little, if anything, that is correct in the laws we all are enforced to obey. They are there supposedly to increase your personal freedom, but as a matter of fact, they only decrease it. These laws are there to make a powerless social puppet out of you without your own will and, unfortunately, in most cases this has proven out to be successful. What ever happened to that once proud and independent man who was more than merciless in his faith for nature and those of his kind? That very man who carried out his life with honour and pride in the name of nature? What happened?

The human race of today is a bunch of loosers and betrayers without any inner strenght or courage. Mindlessly they do not even wish to open the social authority to question. They just live without any insight on the surroundings existing around them and within them, blinded by their own ignorance. The sad part is that this description truly fits well to 99,9 per cent of earth's population. Christian-minded weaklings, hypocrites and parasites dwelling in around every corner. And when someone starts a serious conversation about the situation today, everyone will be out of the room in a second, labeling you "weird" or "sick". They do not even want to hear the truth about this society. They do not want to hear it because they cannot handle the truth due to their own weakness. The truth would make them throw away the "secure" and "safe" life they have been living in the illusion of freedom all the time. Reality is too harsh for them. Reality is too real for them.

Therefore, as just examplified, the society today does not only consist of written laws. Inevitably people have in their consciousness this Christian thought of what is appropriate and what is inappropriate to do in certain situations. These are the unwritten Christian laws. It is, for instance, of reprehension to start a serious conversation about the quality of life today during a small dinner where you are only supposed to discuss the weather and latest celebrity gossip. Of reprehension is also to wear visually different clothes than what is the current trend, or to generally act in a different manner than how people are usually acting in certain situations. Each and every one of us have surely felt the staring eyes on one's back, soaked in repulse, at some point in our lives due to these aforementioned unwritten laws. The police are the guardians of Christian morality in practice, but generally people themselves are the very guardians of morality in everyday life. An unwritten law is a value put to practice. Whenever you are stepping beyond the generally accepted social norms, people immediately think you are not doing things "normally". But what is this criterion that fundaments the essence of "normality" in our society? A loud yes, the Christian values!

Although Christianity is a degenerating force in every aspect, it is very fascinating to notice how the Christians have branded the one who does things out of the free will, has a natural fascination upon the darkest of matters and, indeed, supports the survival of the fittest as a principle: Satan. Having its origin in Hebrew, the word Satan is supposedly equivalent to that of "the adversary". This entity has maintained its power even to our modern days, like everything else that is Christian, and every once in a while Satan appears in the media in a form of art or crime. Many forms of art, music most primarily, have given room for this entity during our time and it is no longer a secret of any kind the most resultative operator in this field has been Black Metal, a music style well expanded over the youth of today. Black Metal in its purest form is based upon the many manifestations of Satan and the dimensions that lie therein. Youngsters are very eager to find that something they are looking for, and this is why Black Metal has been able to grow such thick roots into the youth of today. However, unfortunately the vast majority of the listeners, or of the musicians for that matter, do not have the slightest idea of the esoteric world hiding behind Black Metal, resulting to a lack of seriousness and depth within the Black Metal "scene". It is but an indisputable fact that the musicianship has taken over the real message. Black Metal bands are traveling all around the world with their "tourbusses" and "busy schedules", leaving the true warlike side only to their false images. More thoughts are being invested on the studio budjet of the next album rather than on how to truly resurrect the heathen flame for once and for all. Black Metal "scene" is nothing but a headless herd consisting of people who create the music, people who sell the music and people who buy the music. Where is the war?

Though yet there are those who have seriously grown deeper and deeper into the Planet Black Metal, forming themselves strong platforms based upon the darkest aspects of life. Herein lies the potential of the music. Black Metal is an utterly powerful and effective tool to make the listener open to question the Christian society and its values when performed by the right people in the right way. The music stirs up Anti-Christian spirit, and maybe with time these listeners and musicians will also open their eyes for the truth and become real soldiers instead of the "wanna-be" type of teenagers they are now. Eventhough Black Metal as a genre and as a whole has undergone recently an huge inflation in its seriousness and attempt to truly attack the Christian society, like mentioned, it still remains as the most powerful form of Anti-Christian artistic expression to date. To conclude this matter - the myth of Satan is mostly been kept alive by three kinds of people: firstly there are those who are creating Black Metal music just for the fun of playing. This kind of people are involved in the Satanic themes in order to get identities for themselves without any serious knowledge over the particular matter therein. Secondly there are those who truly have fallen in love with this Christian fantasy figure Satan, entitling themselves as Devil Worshippers. This kind of people have fallen for the oldest Christian trap there is by thinking Satan is a personal and formal force. To set the record straight, let it be said that the belief in a Christian invention namely Satan is just as pathetic and weak as the belief in a Christian invention namely God, even if Satan does represent the natural instincts of man more properly. However, the third and the last group are the Satanists, people who have taken the word "Satanist", the adversary, the oppositionist, to signify their role in the Christian society. Satanists do not act like the slaves of Satan as Devil Worshippers, Satanists act like Satan himself. Therefore the life of a Satanist is pretty much the same as that of any individual free of all Christian influence in himself. The only difference is in the fact that the Satanist holds on to the Christian terminology by using the name and has also a natural fascination upon the darkest aspects of life. Thus the Satanist practices rituals and ceremonials that mainly work for the self, to get closer and closer to the dark forces & energies existing around him and within him. Yet though it needs to be emphasized here that Satan is, indeed, nothing but a Judeo-Christian invention in itself. Without Satan as a threat, Christianity had never become such a devastatingly powerful force. You should ask yourself: would there be any point in being Christian if there was no Satan, damnation and hellfire? Basically no. Satan is the saviour of Christianity: Christians have used throughout the centuries Satan as a tool to convert more and more people down into the pits of heaven. This phenomenon was remarkably available in particular during the Middle Ages when people scared for their lives due to Satan. Eventhough Satan is to be respected for what He represents, let us not forget Satan still does belong entirely to the Jewish mythology, to the Jewish culture, to the Jewish race and to the Jewish world. Satan has no place in our soil just as God has no place in our soil. Both are Jewish creatures and must only be existent where they are born. Our soil has only place for the pagan mythology, the pagan culture, the pagan spirit, the pagan symbols, the pagan race and the pagan world. Everything else than that which derives straightly from one's own culture must be branded as an alien influence. Those who feel the natural fascination upon the dark forces & energies must seek and worship those gods and goddesses that represent darkness in their own culture. Why keep up the Jewish lie alive here in our soil? For no reason. Satan does represent the values and morals that are honourable and to an utterly high extent natural, but by keeping up the name Satan alive, we are only making Christianity more powerful. Wake up sons and daughters of Satanic reality! Let the Jewish lies fall to the ground in every possible form! The only true Satanists and Devil Worshippers can be found in places like Israel where Christianity is their ancient and "natural" religion - as ironic as it sounds. The real "Satan" for Christianity in our soil is our Pagan Reality. Let us take back that which is ours and abandon that which is not.

Having mentioned Black Metal as the most powerful form of art in the previous chapter, it does not mean though other forms of artistic expression were worthless though. In this society art and its many forms are of extreme importance for any heathen. Art is a very ancient way to transform the innermost down on paintings, sculptures, compositions or scriptures. To channel the feeling into another form takes talent, and not very many have this talent. Many think they have, but they don't. Art, with its various manifestations, serves both, the artists as well as the consumer very well. Heathen art in all of its forms are to be supported one hundred per cent! Not only due to the satisfaction of self, but due to the propaganda value behind it. Long live serious artistic expression!

To stress the helter skelter we face today even more, it could be stated: those who are breaking the laws are all the way more intellectual and spirited individuals than the ones who are making the laws. The whole thing is hanging entirely upside down, but then again, this is understandable as we didn't build this world - they did. We just have to live here under their command, whether we like it or not. Those who are spending their life away behind bars ought to be immediately released, for what have they done wrong? They have broken the laws of our Christian society. Is that a crime, really? This kind of people ought to be rewarded with extreme appreciation! The presidents, the kings, the governments and the parliaments leading this Christian society are the ones to be locked up for the crimes they have done against nature and mankind throughout the centuries. It is them who are to be blamed! It is them who are to be prosecuted. It is them who are to be destroyed!

It is as well of sincere irony to witness how philosophy is gaining more popularity amongst the youth of today. Nothing wrong with that in itself if it was real philosophy in the vein of Nietzsche instead of that "aren't-you-impressed-by-the-amount-of-books-I-have-read" sort of thinking these modern "philosophers" tend to represent consciously or unconsciously. Having touched this subject, I think this matter deserves some more space here. To set the record straight: true philosophy is existentialistic, but yet, practical. What is wrong with these "philosophers" we can see in universities and other morally corrupted places these days is the very indisputable fact that basically none of them are dealing with questions that would lead to answers mankind must find. Yes, you can ponder like Descartes that: "I am thinking, thus I am alive", but it is rather meaningless, unpractical and useless information. The emphasis ought to be placed upon things that concern the everyday life and the situations therein. Real philosophy and thinking would lead anyone with brains to open this Christian society and the values it cherishes to question - and I don't see this happening in the circles of these present "philosophers". The modern "philosophy" and "wisdom" has much more to do with the power of deduction rather than real thinking. This kind of people are all the way more interested in showing off than opening the true gates of spiritual growth. Nietzsche was the first, and sadly enough probably also the last, in the history of philosophy who had anything to say that really had to do with the truth to such delightfully high extent - no wonder he is generally looked upon by the masses as the most hated person ever. Nietzsche's vision of the Übermensch is, indeed, the vision that ought to portray the mind of every philosopher. Übermensch is exactly that what man has to be. To date, Nietzsche have not had anyone to continue his respectable work in a serious manner, and this is just a sole proof of what is the level of thinking amongst the human race today. Philosophy has become a meaningless "hobby" that will be taken up every once in a while whenever one feels like it! Unbelievable! How can "the loving of wisdom" become a "hobby"? Fools, I say. Thinking is, indeed, the thing that deviates a human being from an animal, but if the human race of today thinks that even thinking must be a "hobby", what does it tell us? It tells us the very fact that a human being is beneath a worm in the hierarchy of nature. At least the worm is following the laws of nature, even if unconsciously. A human being is not even competent enough to do that.

To exemplify furthermore how the human race is vehemently fighting against the very laws of nature is not an immensely demanding task: by letting the mentally retarded, handicapped, crippled and other scum of the earth to live. In a more realistic and nature-bonded society all the aforementioned caprices of nature would die out, and thus the necessary natural balance would be achieved, at least better than now. This does not happen today as we have all sorts of hospitals and medicines for different kind of diseases and epidemics. Surely there has not been one single civilization in the past that had not taken care of its own, but earlier on it was done with moderation. The problem is that today the respect for human life is overwhelmingly exaggerated, to put it mildly. Nothing is supposed to be equal to that of human life, not other animals, not nature itself, nothing! This is senseless utilism that, indeed, has led the human race to face the problems with all sorts of catastropfes. And need I mention once again where this utilism is originally springing from, you got it, Christianity. I say nothing to excess, even if it is human life that is in question. There are reasons why some of us are born handicapped and why deadly diseases exist. It is to remain the balance in the face of the earth. But what do the death-fearing Christian-minded lowlives do? They are relying on their precious technology in order to find the cure to diseases and keeping the handicapped alive in some machines. They are now even cloning each other. How sick is that? Ultimately, what it comes down to, is that the human race is trying to kill the death, as unbelievable as it sounds. No one should die and we all should live in an environment where nothing is a threat for human life. It really could not get much more insane than this. By defying death the human race is just causing its own death in the long run. What happened to moderation here? If someone's life is dependent on a machine, is that life worth living, anyway? Stop the human mind as it works today. Let the weak fall. Overpopulation is generally established as the biggest threat for the existence of life on earth and, honestly, the only way to keep this ball rolling is by starting to kill humans. There is no other way. Rebuild the concentration camps and open the ovens! Whenever a trigger is being pulled, something unbelievably positive has happened. Whenever another youngster has passed out in the street corner crack in his veins, something unbelievably positive has happened. Whenever another mother has lost her infant, something unbelievably positive has happened. Whenever someone finds out to carry HIV, something unbelievably positive has happened. Life through death, remember? Yet there is no way the Christian society would ever take such a policy as described above because it is in contradiction with their unnatural morals, so thus we are all destined to face the apocalypse. No one gets out of here alive. You just cannot change the world anymore. In the name of life the human race will kill the life. They think they are something indispensable and oh so important when they save the weak from the treasures of death, eventhough it is, indeed, death itself they are welcoming to all of us.

Speaking of death and destruction, it has been calculated that in the Second World War and its ravages altogether about 51 million people died. Hail Hitler! Is there a bigger contribution one man can give to the world? What would have happened if these 51 million had had the chance to continue living and breeding? Considering that the population still was all the way more in control, say, 60 years ago, Hitler did a huge favour to the human race by taking out some millions. Hitler also cherished and appreciated the laws of nature till the very end. He tried to get hold of all the mentally retarded, handicapped and homosexuals - those who degenerate the race in general - and pass them on to the concentration camps. This is how every healthy society ought to act if it truly wishes to find its survival in the long run. The weak must not be saved. The weak must be took out of the game. Do not lock them in hospitals, lock them in graves. This way the society in question will purify itself of degenerating influences as well as save notable financial costs in the upkeep of these whims. It is also very important for any society, wishing to continue its existence, to put an end to social security. Let us fight for the last piece of meat and see who is valuable and strong enough to survive. The Jewsystem of today is trying to build a coherent and safe environment for every citizen, of course, as the competition in between the habitants would result in the decline of the weaker party and the victory of the stronger. They just cannot let nature have its course. By trying to save everybody, they are causing their own death as time passes, let it be said once again. The point herein is not to forget all about humanity and turn ourselves into animals, quite the opposite really, it is to truly use our brains for the sake of survival. The continuous existence of homosexuals, mentally retarded, crippled and other scum is a sole proof of how sick things really are in the system. To some extent, it has even become acceptable and popular in certain circles to be a homosexual. Just imagine how repulsive is that? The modern man has no mind of its own. He has an open mind that is willing to accept everything by never really opening the particular matter to question. Everything must be accepted because we are all "different", they say. The "different" in this context mean and is equal to "harmless". They are accepting everything as long as it does not stand against their Christian society and their Christian morality. The minute you open your eyes and free yourself from those unnatural chains, they will try to shut you up one way or another. It says in the constitution that you have a right for the freedom of speech, for instance. Yet, in addition, there is a small remark: "as long as it does not stand against the general goodness". And I dare to ask one more time: who are the ones to decide what is "general goodness" in this context. Christianity has overshadowed everything that is going on in the society, this is but a mere fact.

Another disturbing aspect showing the unnaturality of the system today is the acceptance of racial integrity. It is supposed to be an ideal achievement when there are no borders, no countries and we all should live in a peaceful harmony. This sort of "hippie" thinking is, indeed, totally ridiculous and must be avoided at any cost. Just see where has your racial integrity led in The United States of America, the melting pot of all cultures and races. The country is in total chaos. Racial thinking ought to be highly encouraged nowadays as it definitely is the only solution to solve these problems. Once again the society refuses to face this as it is in contradiction with their morals and values according to which we are all "equal" and thus should accept everyone and live in peace. I ask: why should the natural order among different cultures and different races be scattered? For no reason, really. But once again, people are doing everything that stands in their power so that nature would not have its course. Racism is a healthy sign and a natural reaction rather anything else. "Racial purity - Our security".

And why is that Whites are always seen as the majority, anyway? It is but a fact that only 8 per cent of the earth's population consists of Whites. We are an endangered species in comparison to those of the other bloodlines. This does not mean that I wish there were more Whites as there is today, however, because the figure that comes out of the aforementioned 8 per cent is still much too big. This rather means that destruction ought to take over creation here, and the destruction ought to start out of the majority, that being the coloured.

Let us face it, each race has its own characterictics and we are not equal by any means. The niggerscum would still be learning how to stand with two feet if it was not for the White influence that came to Africa, to put it symbolically. You cannot compare the Blacks to Whites in anything except physical strenght, seriously. Monkeys will always be monkeys. Just face it! I do, indeed, blame the White man for his lack of futuristic vision when the first niggers were shipped from Africa to serve as slaves. If it was not for this, I sincerily believe this thrashy folk would still be crawling in the mud. Having a glance at history proves that eventhough the Christian influence has destroyed to a considerably high extent the White mind, it is still far above the level of the Blacks, which is the lowest of all levels. Nigger is no human nor an animal. Nigger is something in between, managing to combine the weakest elements of the both mentioned categories unsuccessfully. The problem is that now these lowlife scavangers are being welcomed with open arms to invade our Nordic lands for once and for all, like if it was an act of "racism" if they were not accepted. This is Christian Jewpropaganda at its peak. This flood of Black immigrants, refugees and other creeps must be stopped. Our society is already now on the edge of downfall in pretty much every aspect. And besides, why do not these oh so "poor" refugees fight for their culture and tribe instead of run away like cowards from the war? Such cowards they are. Who are we to give food and shelter to these pathetic deserters? Let them die for their unfaithful behaviour towards their own people. Same goes for the more "advanced" countries sending enormous developmental aid for the Third World countries. Let them mind their own business and let us mind our own business. If the niggers down there are too stupid to have any birth control, for one instance, why should we interfere? For no reason. Once again I can only say the respect for human life is overwhelmingly exaggerated. The developmental aid, the sight of having niggers and others from the thrash cultures and races infesting the Nordic landscape is the final prove how unnatural, degenerated, unintelligent, pathetic, insane and sick this system run by the spiritual Jews truly is. Can we go any lower, really? Racism and racial segregation are totally healthy elements and should be supported by everyone with even the least bit of brains left. Those of our race who are involved with those of the mudraces should take a long and deep look at themselves: the worst betrayers. However, even if the culture and the race of Niggers is extremely disgusting, let them have it down there in the deserts of Africa. Just do not come here and spread your degenerated ways. Why should the White race once again bend itself and crawl in the feet of these savages by welcoming them in? Because, hey, "we are all equal", the common man would answer due to a Christian value called equality in himself. The Christian influence is always there where some form of degeneration is taking serious place.

As it is obvious these spiritual Jews are the ones in power today, needless even to mention, democracy does not exist. It is always some form of dictatorship that is being controlled by those who have the most power. And as just said, unlucky us, the most power these days are in the hands of Christians. They say the society is democratic, but the means to change the environment that stand in possession of the common man are, unsurprisingly, insignificant. What can you do, really? Vote? Yeah, right. The world keeps dancing to the tune of very few influential and powerful sirs. Basically all you can do is to obey their orders and follow their laws. Freedom is an illusion, an illlusion that will not happen until death will reach us and take us. Freedom you will find in a shotgun these days. There's your freedom. There's your democracy. Use it or lose it!

It truly is an inescapable cage anyone with non-Christian values have to bear in this society. An ideal life is supposed to form out of different kind of emotions, a colourful spectre of feelings, making life rich in every way. However, the only kind of emotions anyone truly out of the Christian values, restrictions, laws and morals can feel in this Christian society are hate and sorrow. And these emotions come on strong, to put it mildly. Emotions like love does not exist for anyone who have opened their eyes for the truth. It should exist, but it doesn't, for hate and sorrow have overtaken it all the way. Love exists only for those who are blind enough not to open their eyes for the truth. The only thing a true heathen would love these days is war. Nothing else.

It is very hard not to become a misanthrope once you have taken a realistic look around. There must be thousands of reasons why hate the human race and, quite frankly, one can't figure out one single reason why to love it when seeing how things stand today. Misanthrophy is no longer something rare, it has become a natural characterictic for any thinking individual. It is impossible to escape the hate. Hate is the fate of anyone with an insight to the world today. Those who are philanthrophic are the ones bind to blindness most resultatively. Having said that, it is with sorrow I witness the becoming of philanthrophy as one of the main characterictics of man these days. Philanthrophy as a principle is deriving straight from the emptiness inside. When you have no life "inside" yourself, you start to spend your time and energy on those "outside" yourself, as you have nothing else better to do. You live your life through the other people, and thus they become essential to you. They become of vital relevance for your own life and its meaning. Philanthrophy as a value ought to be existent when the people you associate with are on the same level. But seeing how things stand today, we are NOT equal to each other! We might have been equal, say, 1000 years ago, but equality lost its quality the minute Christianity treaded on our soil.

Life has become meaningless in this world. Life is nothing. Life is absolutely nothing. As it stands today you can live your life either by: 1). Swallowing the Christian rules 2). Giving up this fight for freedom and adapting the sort of "the hell with it" mentality 3). Isolating yourself in the wilderness and trying to avoid any human contact 4). Killing yourself 5). Declaring a war in the name of the truth and killing as many humans as it stands on your power. These are your options.

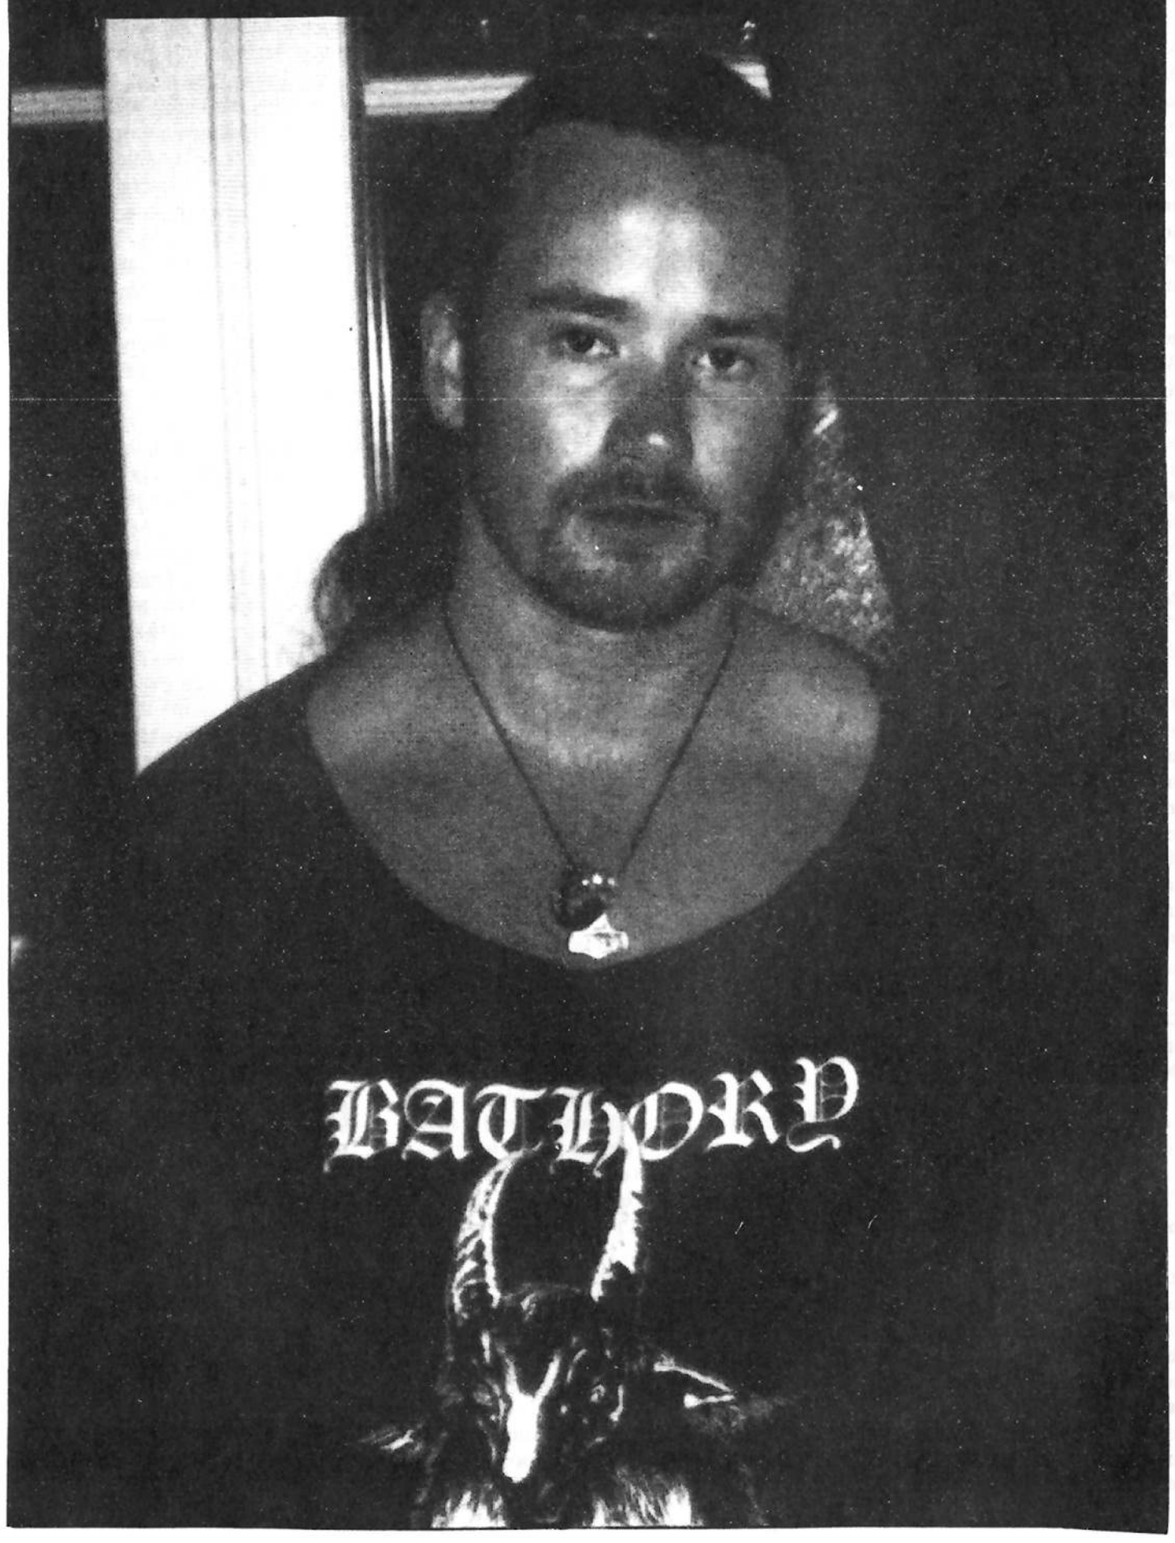
There you have it. Those who take the numbers 1 and 2 can consider themselves as loosers in the long run and not strong enough in their will. These are the people who go to bed at night silently thinking themselves as betrayers. They will never admit it to others, but they do feel it deep inside. Eventhough it is understandable that this still is one's only life and it really can cause utmost pain and sorrow to throw it all away, in the end it ought to be realized that this is not a life in its true sense, this is just an awful dream. The number 3 is recommended for anyone who can afford it, and as for number 4, killing yourself is, indeed, an act based upon weakness. Even if it is an unbearable amount of sorrow and pain we are enforced to carry inside, suicide ought never to be an option. Rather at that point one ought to take the number 5 and show no mercy at all. It can be an individualistic war or it can be something of a larger scale, but the point is to stand all the way for your beliefs, like any real heathen would. As a matter of fact, the number 5 is an inescapable necessity for any self-respecting heathen. It is always better to burn out than fade away. Don't ever forget it! Only the loosers will fade away. And even if you manage to isolate yourself from the Christian society deep in the woods, refering to number 3, you must die in a battle. There is not any other way. War is the only option in the end and everything else is of no value. Of course there are also then those few lucky ones who have found their survival and their living in this society by creating their own art, deriving straight from their heathen souls. This is one way of living your life as well, but even those who belong to this rare minority ought not to escape the war. Need it to be said one more time that everyone, every single one, who look upon himself opposed to Christians, must take serious action against the prevailing Judeo-Christian society in every possible form. Burn their churches, kick their graves, rape their nuns, hang their priests, break their laws, fight their propaganda and kill everyone who has even the slightest hint of Christian influence in himself. Yet, most importantly: Never give up! Never ever give up! This means you will have to fight basically everyone alive all the time, but this is the only way. This is your duty, and everything else is worthless.

Father of Jews - Thou art doomed! Feel my knife slicing down YOUR throat tonight! WAR!

This manifesto was supposed to make you think, to make you feel, to make you see. Did you?

BÅRD G. EITHUN

"I killed one of you"



Sometimes you just gotta do what you gotta do to make your dreams come true. Bearing this in mind, it is with sheer pleasure I introduce you Bård G. Eithun, the former percussionist of a groundbreaking Norwegian Black Metal band Emperor. Faust, as he was infamously named in the past, has done time over half a decade now in Ullersmo Landsfengsel, the largest prison of Norway, for "Satanic crimes".

How has the imprisonment affected Bård? How is he relating to the matters he burns for nowadays? Was it all worth it? Does that fire still burn inside of him? The very fire that previously led to human wreckages, burned down churches and desecrated graves. I travelled to Ullersmo to find out and here is an exclusive and conclusive interview with Bård, straight from the slammer.

I was very much looking forward to meet Bård ever since I got my visiting permission from the prison authorities of Ullersmo Landsfengsel. Thoughts and visions were running through my mind with an enormous speed when the dawn of the scheduled day broke open. My plane had just landed at Fornebu airport on that clouded Saturday morning and I was in a bit of a hurry finding my way to the hotel and, right after, taking a local train to Klofta where the notorious Ullersmo is residing. Luckily I managed to make it in time and the sooner I thought I was already making my entrance through a massive prison wall. Two guards came up welcoming me with a metal detector and relatively poor English. I was shown immediately to the visiting room where Bård was already waiting for my appearance. "Are you okay?" he conviniently started. Bård looks exactly the way I had thought. He has an utterly long hair and a sturdily built up body - the latter can be explained by the fact he has been pumping up iron with a devastating conviction throughout the years inside. No room for weakness here, literally. He is doing time in isolation at the time of the visit because of a certain incident.

What are your values of life and would you rather die than break them?
Everyone have their values. It can be anything from normally accepted social norms to deep convictions based on lifestyle. Mine would be that I view the world as a jungle and you can use all necessary means in order to survive. Survival is after all quite important, both physically and psychically. My value is to stay alive, in a somewhat proper condition.

Would you say then your life has been constant development physically as well as psychically?
I tend to have a very pessimistic way of looking at life. Sometimes I think my life has been one step forward and two steps back. I have my own ability to get stuck in shit, so to say. But of course my life has been constant development, both physically as well as psychically. If I realized something else would be the case, something had gone wrong.
Anyway, since my imprisonment I have opened my mind and started to look at other things in my life. I was too narrow-minded and ignorant when I was outside. Just a stupid little kid who thought he knew things about life. Anyway, everyone has a past.

It seems like if the prison sentence has changed you as a person to a rather high extent. Am I right?
Yeah, it has certainly changed me a lot. I have learned a lesson or two about life and it has made me rethink many of my previous views and attitudes. Everyone would benefit from a year or so in prison, I really mean it. Anyway, I still have the same old "fuck off and die" mentality that I have always had, but now it's more of a cognitive and knowledge-related "fuck off and die" mentality.

Is there anything you regret doing in the past?
There are always things I rethink over and give a lot of thoughts, but as a principle I never regret anything I have done. Sure there are some things that would be best undone, but what the hell, who hasn't felt this from time to time?

Black Metal as a movement has been infected for several years now by an unserious bunch of pathetic loosers. Now, thinking back some years, I remember you saying: "The Black Metal scene is the only thing I've got left, my life is totally dedicated to the cause". How do you feel about the whole thing now?
In the beginning - after my arrest - I was still very hooked up on the Black Metal movement and back then it was obvious for me that Black Metal was the last thing I had left, but I have of course somewhat changed my views in the recent years. Today, there isn't really any "movement" or anything. I mean, it's totally fucked up, but then again, it's also a cliché to talk about how much better everything were before...
Anyway, I feel no need to be compared to many of today's people involved with the music. The point is gone and it serves no purpose, really. Nonetheless, I still respect some people & bands around - usually those I have known for some years - but there also appear some new people & bands that I respect, although not often.

Well, even if Black Metal doesn't really strike your fancy anymore, when you look right back into the past glory, what would you say was the best aspect of the whole movement in Norway?
The best aspect was probably that we created something new and we created shockwaves in the politically correct, conformity-oriented established world of music, not only nationally but internationally. The world had never seen anything like that before and it did not only affect musical milieus, but also other parts of the remaining society. Creating a wave, that somewhat is still rolling.

"Christianity is built upon weakness and pityness, and so is the modern day society. I can just observe and pretend to play along."

Yes, the wave of heathendom is still rolling rather efficiently in Norway. There are numerous Anti-Christian bands constantly releasing strong albums and as I have gathered, even churches are still burning. Do you think there is an end to this?
Well, I'm not sure if it's the wave of heathendom or if it's the wave of "profitdom" that sweeps over Norway, but I really don't think that most of the new bands emerging from Norway serve any purpose. I guess they are only in it for "sex, drugs and rock 'n roll" or whatever. Well, seriously, the burnings have decreased very much now, as good as no burnings have occured the last year 1997. Oh, I don't really care about it anymore. The symbolic value was lost after the arrests in 1993 and now it's only a parody on something that once was. For my own concern, the burnings might just as well stop because as long as there aren't any true ideologies or convictions behind the actions, there's not really any point in doing them.

Bård and Alver (the Emperor bassist) at the gates of Ullersmo.

Still thinking back, what comes up in your mind as the best and worst memories of your life?
A very difficult question to answer really, perhaps because my best memories include my worst memories and vice versa. I have a lot of bad memories from the early times of my arrest of course like the custody, the trouble of accepting my situation and such, but there are also a lot of good memories from that, too. Some of my best memories are from my time with Emperor, what we achieved when I was in the band, the records and such.

Emperor were always looked upon as a bunch of extremists caught up in the primitive ways of Satanism. Today the band have risen to be one of the leading metal acts of this decade. What would you say about Emperor's life and existence throughout the years?
If I view Emperor's development from the "Wrath of the Tyrant" demo up until the last album "Anthems to the Welkin at Dusk" I would say the development has been just incredible. The band started out playing primitive and straight-to-the-core Black Metal. From the beginning it was clear that no compromises would be made. On the "Emperor" MLP the style was developed a little, although still maintaining the rawness and primitivity. With "In the Nightside Eclipse" LP we probably created what is regarded as the Black Metal album ever, and it set new standards for which direction Emperor planned to take in the future. Just about all reviews and feedbacks on the album were highly positive, which, of course, pleased me very much as this was the last release I would appear on with Emperor because I was arrested about a month after the recording was finished. The music remained more or less the same on both, the "Reverence" MLP and the "Anthems to the Welkin at Dusk" LP, although a little developed and faster, which, indeed, is only natural. Some people say today that Emperor have sold out and become rockstars and all that shit. Well, if high record-sales are synonymous with selling out and being rockstars, then so be it, I don't care. People are basically stupid, and trying to explain something for the common man is a waste of time. Just bang your head against the wall and you will achieve better results. Anyway, you don't sell out by selling lots of records, but if you change your music according to the trend in order to make money, then you can start talking about selling out. Emperor have always played what they wanted and that's what they are gonna continue doing. End of story.

Just out of pure curiosity, is there any particular Emperor track that means the most to you and brings up the old gloriful memories alive again?
"Inno a Satana" is the best Emperor track ever. It's my all-time favourite. It's so epic with a song-structure that is just filled with emotions. Man, I totally love that song. Too bad there never were time, money or possibility for a video of that song. It would have been beautiful, really.

How about occultism and Satanism? Once there was a time you were, may I say, possessed by these themes. Does either one play a role in your life anymore?
They did once, or probably, I thought they did. There was a time when I was kinda into all that, although I might have felt it as an obligation as well, and I was reading everything I could about it. I still have interest for the dark side - especially those of man - but Satanism and occultism as thesis, ideologies or ways of life are not really on my daily agenda. Today I read more about man and what motivates him to do what he does. You know, I'm a little bit psychological. Furthermore I prefer reading a lot of history and I study the history of religions at school, which, indeed, includes a lot of occultism - especially from the history of Christendom and Middle Eastern mythology. Also science and paranormal activity, and especially the link between those, interest me. So as you can see, I was too narrow-minded before, trying to concentrate only on what was regarded as "evil" in the Christian concept and from there on trying to build a platform and a worldview.

You just mentioned you have been reading a lot of history. Are there any exceptionally great or pathetic human beings in the past that inevitably have stuck in your mind?
There are many both, great and pathetic, people throughout the world history. I view history only as a reaction and a consequence of the development of societies, cultures, religions, states etc. History is a dialectic relationship between man and the surroundings around him. Pointing out the greatest people and the failures would be impossible. They are just actors and small pieces in the big picture anyway. Just tools.

Well, even if Satanism is no longer on your daily agenda, do you still have your once so strong hate against Christians?
Yeah, well, I dislike all kinds of organized religions, especially the big established ones like Christianity, Islam and Judaism. But as for Norway in which Christendom is the state church, they are no threat to anyone I would say. They are basically harmless. Christendom had much more might before - especially in the Middle Ages - but nowadays this religion serves only as a tradition that guarantees social cohesion for a certain amount of people and which basic rules - the ten commandments - are used as "elementary basic rules for behaviour". I mean, Christians don't offend anyone here in Norway, and neither in your Finland I would guess. In the USA the situation is another where there exist strong paramilitary extremist groups that are willing to sacrifice themselves and others as well to serve the Cause of God. But as for here in Norway, they are no threat to anyone. A bigger threat - in my eyes - is the big income of Muslims to Norway. The Muslim religion is the fastest growing religious denomination in the country and it's also probably - in my eyes once again - the most arrogant and intolerant one as well. Integration of Muslims, among others, within the Norwegian society has proven not to be successful and it's only a question of time before we face serious conflicts with this religious denomination. The Norwegian-born population is decreasing while the Muslim religion is the fastest growing religious denomination. What happens the day these two denominations are equal to each other?

Would you personally ever become a refugee no matter what, like these Muslims you just mentioned?
It's difficult to say, really. You never know what's gonna happen and where. Anyway, I couldn't imagine myself as a refugee, really. I'm a little bit too obstinate for that.

"I still have the same old 'fuck off and die' mentality that I have always had, but now it's more of a cognitive and knowledge-related 'fuck off and die' mentality."

The Third World War is closer now than ever before with the strained relationship between Iraq and The United States of America. Would you really care if this all just ended up in ashes?
I think it's all a tragic comedy or a parody, really. I mean, sure, Saddam Hussein is a semi-nigger with an attitude problem. Then we have this guy in Washington, Bill Clinton, that had some blow-jobs and desperately tries to draw the attention from his affairs to the alleged problems in Iraq. Then there is a drunk in Moscow, Boris Jeltsin, who doesn't know which part of the world to blow up. I mean, our destiny is in the hands of these psychopaths. No wonder everything is going straight to hell. I just hope to get out from prison before all hell breaks loose.

To change the subject, many of those within Norwegian Black Metal milieu have recently settled down by getting married and having children. This seems rather strange when considering the relatively young age and the misanthropic image of those involved. How about you? Do you think this business with commitment has something to do with the strong conservative traditions you Norwegians seem to cling on to?
Well, in Norway it is usual that couples get married in their early or mid twenties, so I don't think it is revolutionarily early, really. But anyhow, yes, Norway has a strong tradition of marriage. It is not synonymous with being a Christian tradition though. Christian weddings are only an aspect of the tradition in itself. For me, something like that would be out of question at the moment as the circumstances don't allow it. I was quite hooked up a while ago, but I mean, marrying inside prison is difficult, both emotionally and legally.

Hooked up? So, there is place for unconditional love in your heart as well?
Sure there is always place for unconditional love in Faust's heart as well, but I prefer to take one day at the time.

What about Norse mythology? Many Norwegians seem to be recently taking up the old strong gods again as well.
I acknowledge Norse mythology as a part of my past and my people's past. It's my cultural heritage and it's every Norseman's responsibility to carry it on. It's as simple as that. The history is not objective, because remember, the history is written by history's "spokesmen" - the people who throughout the history have had the most power. This has so far been Christendom and it's a fact that during the Middle Ages several books written by Norwegians and Icelandics between the 11th & 13th century were systematically destroyed by Christians in order to "hide and forget Scandinavia's heathen past". Therefore it's everyone's responsibility to keep our past alive. I admire all persons, organisations, bands, magazines etc. that are trying to keep the Norse past alive and enlighten the modern man.

Speaking of the modern man, what do you see when you look at one?
I just see the usual stuff, ignorance, conformity. Just a lot of bullshit, really. "I killed one of you".

What would you see as the best qualities and characteristics a human being can have?
Difficult to say, really. It could vary. It

> "I was too narrow-minded before, trying to concentrate only on what was regarded as 'evil' in the Christian concept and from there on trying to build a platform and a worldview."

could be all and everything. I look for qualities in other people that I strive to have myself.

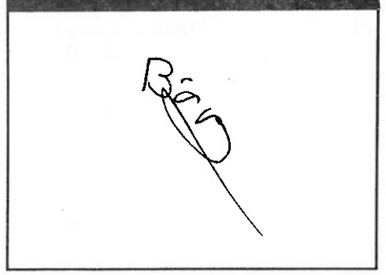
Are you a perfectionist?
I think everyone more or less strive for perfection in their life, in one context or another. Admitting something else would be stupid.

But if everyone is striving for perfection, why are people in general content with their standard and average way of living in the society? They have no ambition or self-respect for developing themselves into a higher level of existence.
You know, the society today is very superficial, very much related around earthly materialism, with the result that everything that is different or new is looked upon as dangerous and scary. It's just a natural consequence.

What is the relevance of nature to you?
Most people I know praise nature and its scenes very highly, but having grown up and living most of my life in a place that has widely of mountains, forests and preserved animals, it's not an obsession for me. Sure, dwelling in the loneliness and solitude you find in a mountain area - totally free of other people - is great from time to time, but only as a contrast to the normal life.

What do you think of the things man has done to nature?
The increasing contamination, the destruction of rainforests and rivers, the reduction of the ozone layer, the extension of deserts and the global heatening are just another examples of man's capability of doing nothing but exterminating himself. Quite a deed really, just managing to remove himself as well as every other living creature from the planet. And man thought he was the highlight of the ladder of evolution?

This modern society of ours is founded by Christians and it shows, really. They locked you up because it says in their ridiculous lawbooks that killing is "wrong", eventhough we all know it's one of the most natural instincts there is. Every animal kills when needed, and so does humans. How do you feel about this?



Christianity is build upon weakness and pityness, and so is the modern day society. I can just observe, and pretend to play along.

Well, have you thought of getting even with these unnatural parasites that locked you up?
No, not really, there wouldn't be any point. In the long run it would only hurt myself further.

You don't think it's possible to raise some serious war against this Christian society?
No, honestly no.

But you already had a fine situation going in 1992 and 1993.
The situation in Norway back in 1992 and 1993 was just the result of a very few people who played with the fire. Some churches burned down, two people dead and when thinking of the fact that one of those was one of ourselves, it was not an unexpected ending. Sure, some economical and emotional damage was created, but a true "war" needs more than 6-8 young people with a can of gasoline, a knife and a lousy organisation, if any organisation at all. No, it was just a period when everything took off, but it ended as quickly as it started. We were brought downground fast.

When I interviewed you in 1994, you still were utterly determinated to fulfill Euronymous' mission in life. Eventhough this matter is thoroughly worn-out, outdated and to some extent awkward, I still would be curious to know how you are reacting to the very subject today?
Well, I was very bitter and full of hate & lust for revenge after Euronymous was killed, and therefore I thought it would be my destiny to fulfill his mission. But, well, what was Euronymous' mission, really? Trying to continue his wish of keeping Death and Black Metal underground would be impossible today, and even he loosened it up a bit towards the end. I guess my definition of his "mission" was a little bit unprecise and not really clear because I really don't know what I could have fulfilled.

If Euronymous and others served as your soulmates earlier, would you say you have any true soulmates, now?
I don't know, probably a few, but a very few.

> "I acknowledge Norse mythology as a part of my past and my people's past. It's my cultural heritage and it's every Norseman's responsibility to carry it on."

It is a general assumption that truly genius people will either end up being artists or prisoners. Could you go along with that?
Well, it's said to be a very tiny, sharp little edge between being a genius or a madman. I don't know, but if I was a free man I would most likely be an artist, in a sense that I performed music. Well, it doesn't really matter, we are all puppets anyway. The Grand Master is only fooling around with us, playing out every little trick he knows.

Music has definitely played a big part in your life. Does it frustrate you that you are now unable to perform music?
It doesn't frustrate me as much now as it did some years ago. I have accepted that I can't play for the time being, but I eventually hope to pick it up again some day. Music is very important to me, extremely important. Music is life, music is death, music is a beautiful sunset, music is violence and romanticism, music is God vs. Satan. For me, music is totally pantheistic.

Now that we are on artistic themes, could you go ahead and describe the landscapes of your soul?
Oh, it's very complex. Sometimes it can be a peaceful, rather quiet night with moonshine while other times it can be a raging sea with thunder and blizzard. My soul is a variety of rage, peace, night and day.

Eventhough your eventual release is still pretty much in the distant future, what kind of visions you have concerning your upcoming freedom right now?
I never think of it, I consciously put it in the darkest corners of my brain. I don't know why, probably because it's so far away in the future and also because I don't know what awaits me. In that way prison is a nice place to be. It's safe, you never have to worry about apartment, rent, food and such. It's all there, fixed for you. You have no responsibility at all and that's good, I don't like responsibility. It makes me sick.

You have been out on a leave four times now. How has the social life looked like from a perspective?
Yeah, I have been out on 4 leaves and life outside seemed very exhausting and very... complex. During my first leave -

Bård and Samoth (the Emperor guitarist) at the gates of Ullersmo

two days - in October 1997 I lost one kilo of weight, so the change from being locked up most part of the day to being outside is really taking most of my energy. Anyway, I won't be having more leaves at the time being because of an incident inside here, so I don't need to worry about losing more weight, really.

When will we all be free?
When hell freezes to ice, because we will never be free. It's a fake illusion, we are bound to suffer. Humans will never be free, we will be slaves whatsoever.

Are there still things in life you would wish to accomplish? There must be something that keeps you going in the dungeons of Ullersmo.
Sure there is. But what I wish to accomplish is what people outside take for granted. For example, I long for the day when I have my own apartment, because I have spent my last 5 years living together with other people. It gets exhausting after a while. I also wait for the time when I can start traveling around the world, because there is really much I want to see. You could say that what keeps me going is my hope that one day I am out of this system and be able to make my own decisions again. It would really be something...

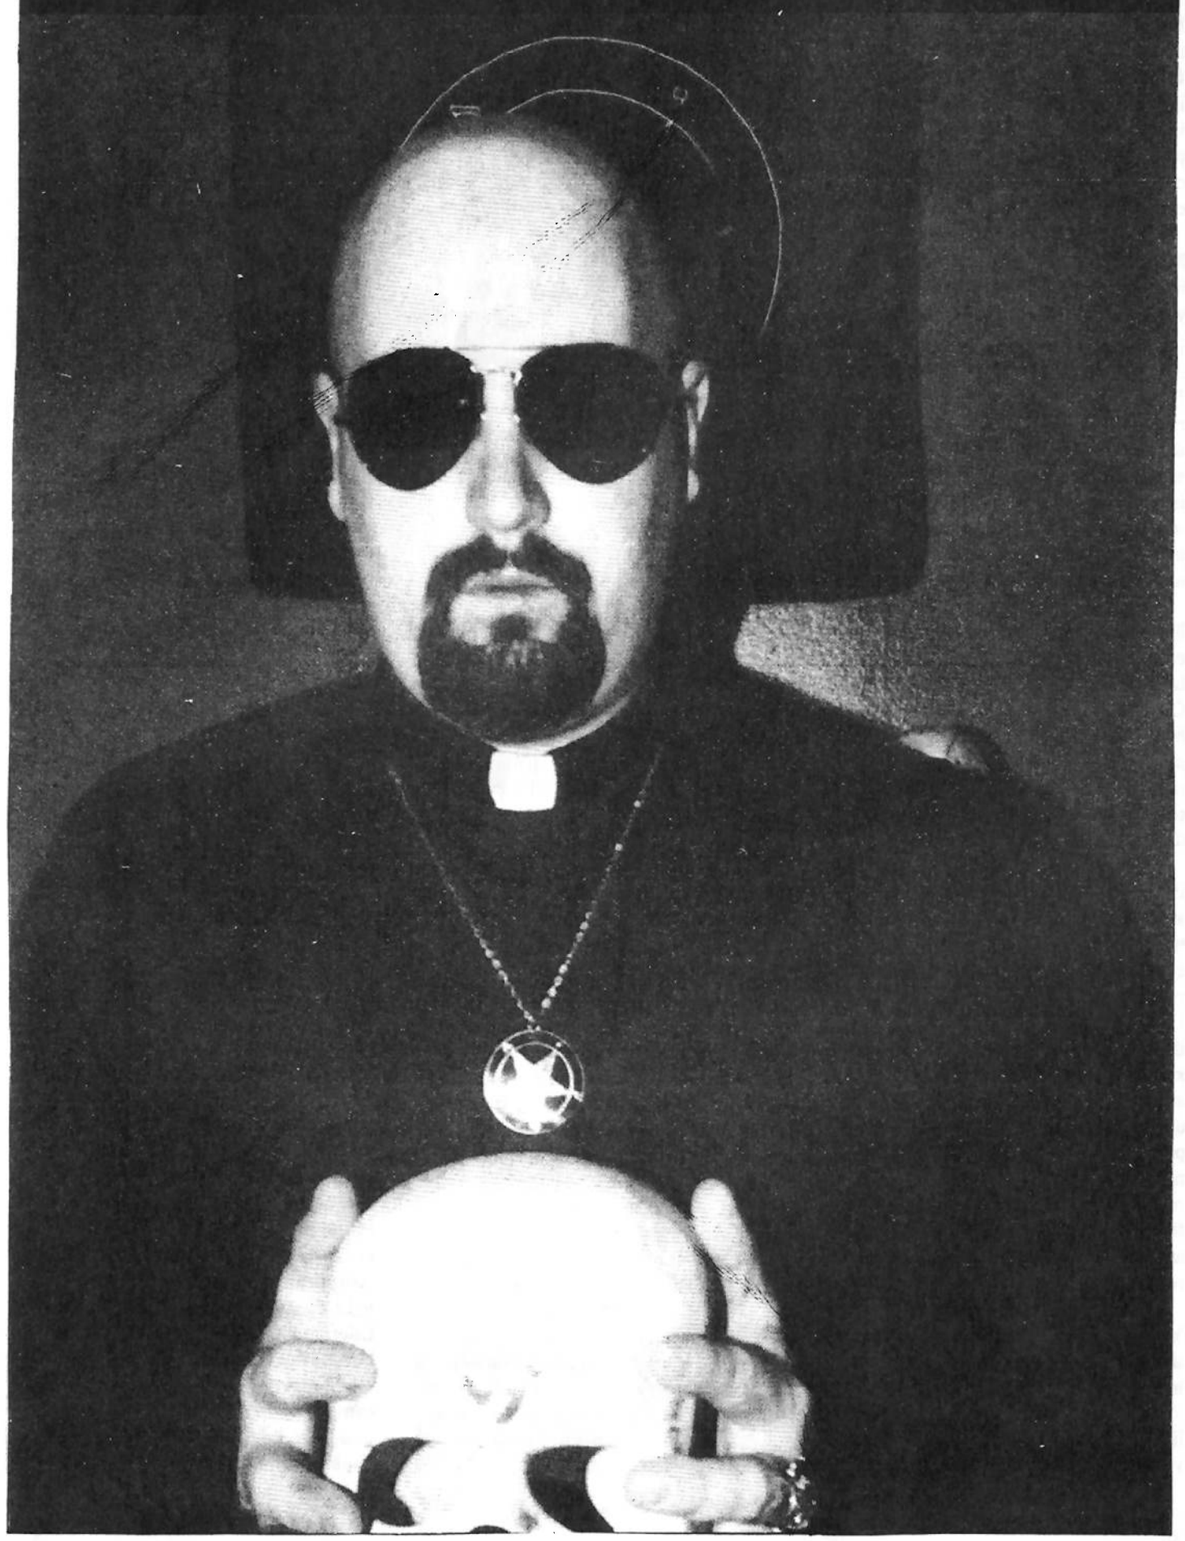
You have sometimes called yourself an agnostic when it comes to death. Even if speculating about what comes after death is rather pointless, maybe you still have a vision?
I have no vision. I think about it from time to time, but after having heard hundreds of different versions connected to various religious convictions and personal experiences, I have decided to wait and see for myself. It will be the last thrill before I leave. It will be really exciting. What is the worst that could happen anyway?

Okay, to wrap things up, if you had to put the whole life and existence of Bård G. Eithun into a one single sentence, what would it be?
By whom am I not told that life is hard and then you die?

The guard knocks on the door. "Time's up", Bård says to me. I shake his hand and promise to come back again as soon as possible. The feeling is empty. It's tragic. While sitting on a lonely bench at the Klofta station waiting for the train to take me back to Oslo, I am accompanied by a beautiful golden fullmoon. Some kids are drinking and playing good old Kiss tracks on the other side of the rails nearby. A minute by minute I see less of the moon as the thick clouds and fog are draping it up intensively. And so it disappears after awhile beyond the light of a new day above the Planet Ullersmo. Was it a sign? I don't know, but all this made me wonder how much more sick this Christian society can get when it locks up individuals like Bård behind bars. Just think about it.

VINCENT CROWLEY

"If 99% of the earth's population died off, I would be a happy man"



Vincent Crowley is a name that should probably ring a bell to anyone involved in the circles of Satanism. Being appointed to the priesthood of the Church of Satan by Anton Szandor LaVey himself in 1994, Vincent became a spokesman for Satanism in the States. His band, Acheron, is also one of the oldest still existing Satanic metal groups.
Enter the depths of mysticism and feel the real darkness.

Much have been argued and cheered about the nature of all the prevailing Satanic sects, cults, churches, orders, fronts, parties, temples and circles. Especially in the USA the past few years have given birth to an utterly large amount of organisations, all specializing in different aspects of Satanism. Many of them have probably started the almighty dollar in their eyes representing just another pathetic attempt to cash in, but also several serious and dedicated groups have appeared in the horizon with more natural elements involved. The Church of Satan was formed already in 1966 by Anton Szandor LaVey and is very much responsible for the spiritual awakening all over the States. Still, the motives of this group have also been more than often opened to question. The goals of the group were, however, appropriate enough to fire the interest of a well-known American Satanic metal musician Vincent Crowley, who later on joined the Church of Satan, an act highly acclaimed by the founder Anton LaVey himself. Vincent has approached Satan since 1988 when he unleashed fury upon the world with his creation of Acheron. The band was evoked to embody the very essence of Satanism musically, in the most strict sense of the word. Much has happened since the start, many releases have been put out, but most significantly, Vincent has grown out to be a Satanic celebrity to some extent and is today enjoying the "fruits of sin" more than ever. Here follows an interview made with Vincent, mainly touching the Satanic themes from a perspective.

What are your values of life and would you rather die than break them?
To be loyal to myself and those within my circle. Also to advance myself in knowledge, strenght and power. I consider myself a Satanic Social Darwinist. Death before dishonor!

Do you think Satanists are born, not made?
Correct! You have to have the natural instinct to be a follower of the Left Hand Path.

In recent years, especially here in Scandinavia, those who once thought they were Satanists have traded Satan for the worship of ancient pagan gods. These are natural forces and entities, and thus can be looked upon as strong gods unlike the Christian male tyranny. Are you for the return of ancient gods as well?
Since I don't believe in gods, it doesn't really matter to me. I feel Satan is a worthy archetype for my beliefs. As for the Dark force & power I believe in, I would rather call it nature, instead of gods.

Satanists are closely bonded with nature and its laws, for both carry as the ultimate principle the survival of the fittest. What kind of relationship you have with nature?
It is one of the most important things to me. I hate the way mankind has destroyed its beauty. I wish I would have been born in the time of the Vikings to truly enjoy what "Lex Talionis" actually meant.

Many Satanists despise the use of any sort of stimulants, be it then alcohol or drugs, for these chemicals weaken the body, mind and will like we all know. However, many artists, on the other hand, use some drugs solely for expanding their imagination and consciousness. Being a Satanist as well as an artist, where do you stand here?
I really think it depends on the person. I personally don't use drugs, but I do like to indulge in alcohol every once in a while. As long as indulgence doesn't turn into a compulsion, I don't have a problem. But I feel magic should not be altered by any sort of mind-altering elements."

Nietzsche seems to be a very familiar author for Satanic soldiers, and quite frankly, no wonder, for his books carry inside the path of the strong. I gather you have also studied Nietzsche's writings and way of thinking to some extent?
Nietzsche's work is an inspiration. It reveals the way of the elitist. Power and might! More people should try to strive to be his idea of the Superman.

Hitler comprehended Nietzsche's Übermensch as strictly racial, for he believed in the supremacy of the white race. Do you believe there are certain differences between different races, leaving the white one on the top in the hierarchy?
There are of course many differences between various races. Some excel in some things, while others remain unevolved. You can't compare the brilliant European bloodline to the parasitic Ethiopian scavengers. So, sure I feel the white race is on the top of the hierarchy, but this isn't meant to be a "white power" comment. History has proved that whites are a strong and intelligent race. This doesn't mean everyone else is worthless though. I support the idea of eugenics within each race. Breed the best of the best, while maintaining one's heritage. I'll probably get a lot of shit for this answer, but I speak the truth without submitting to political correctness.

Are you for racial segregation?
First off, I consider myself a misanthrope, not a racist. I hate all people equally, including whites. But in the United States of America we have a lot of racial tension. Racial segregation may be the only solution that can resolve this problem. I personally just want to move out in the woods with my family and comrades. Fuck the rest of the world. I hope there is a race war and everyone kills each other.

"We must invoke chaos to have order.
Purification Day is in affect and I look forward to time when I can stain my hands with the blood of my enemies.
Blood must soon flow!"

You just called yourself a misanthrope.
Yes, I hate being around people and dealing with them. Humans are parasites that annoy me. If 99% of the earth's population died off, I would be a happy man.

Do you think there might become a day you can no longer hold back your wrath towards this bunch of wasted flesh some refer to as "humans"?
I could see that in the future. I have a feeling that the shit will hit the fan in the near future. We must invoke chaos to have order. Purification Day is in affect and I look forward to time when I can stain my hands with the blood of my enemies. Blood must soon flow!

The States have no particular history or culture of its own - that is if we are to ignore the modern mass consumption culture which heavily lives there, breeding nothing but degeneration and unnaturality. The only ones there with some real roots and traditions are the Indians with their natural cult. What do you personally think of the condition your country is in today? Is there any hope, really?
America is a cesspool. There is very little hope for anyone. That is why Satanism will soon be the new law of the land. This is because Satanism promotes the rise of the elite individuals, and the demise of the useless.

You have been moving all around the States. Would you care to leave this cesspool, like you put it, for real and head for, say Europe or some other continent?
The United States of America will always be my home base, but I would like to travel the world.

Do you think the conception of Satanism deviates to any extent between Europe and USA?
No, true Satanism is the same no matter where it is.

Satanism is often blended with a load of other dark and obscure matters such as witchcraft, vampirism, lycanthrophy, werewolves, necromancy, occultism and black magic. What do you think of these subjects?
These are all concepts invoked by the darkside. Man has a need for these diabolic ideas, no matter if they are factual or fiction.

Anton Szandor LaVey himself appointed you to the priesthood of the Church of Satan in 1994. Are you satisfied with the way things have worked out there?
Yes, I was very honoured to have received that rank. I was also surprised to be promoted to a Magister in 1996.

The Church of Satan, and Anton Szandor LaVey in particular, have been accused of representing just another form of superficial American lifestyle. What can you say to people who make such accusations?
Fuck them! Most of the idiots who spew such garbage are jealous losers who want their 15 minutes of fame.

There are several organisations in the States driving the Satanic cause onwards. How do you react to all these new cults? Is it just the Church of Satan for you?
I support any group that represents Satanism in a pure form, as does the Church of Satan.

You have become the spokesman for Satanism in the States. Wherever and whenever there's Satan in the media - there's Vincent Crowley. You must have gotten your fair share of enemies as one might expect a Satanic celebrity to have. Am I right?
Yes, unfortunately small-minded imbeciles have nothing better to do than mailing me death-threats or call me up and try to scare me. All I have to say is anyone who tries to fuck with me will get shot. I don't fuck around with that bullshit. But I have yet to have anyone follow through on any threats.

One of your most influential enemies must be Bob Larson, the best-selling author, radio and TV talk show host in the States. You have encountered the guy a couple times now in a public confrontation as a showdown with Satanism. How have these went?
Bob is more of a Satanist than a Christian due to the way he promotes The Church Of Satan and Acheron. He is a scam artist that uses the weak-minded christians to obtain his money. I have been able to debate him several times and my ideas were heard. He's a guy I love to hate. Annoying him gives me satisfaction. He is our Christian puppet!

Back in 1992 you started up an Anti-Christian organisation called The Order Of The Evil Eye, which, however, was disbanded three years later. The official public announcement remorselessly declared: "We feel we have won" as the reason for the disbanding of the group. This is something I have hard time believing. Do you really feel the victory while Christianity is still dominating the world as the biggest religion of all times? Where's the change? What have we won?
Christianity may still be an active force, but it is being stripped of its value. We do feel a victory over the Jesus Freaks. We pissed off a lot of churches and groups in the few years The Order Of The Evil Eye was active. But it was time to evolve. The Christians are showing the public their true colors without us even having to help.

Well, even if the Christian church itself was losing a bit of its conservative might in these days of ignorance, don't you think people are still living up the Christian values and morals blindly in their everyday lives?
No, I really think Christian ideology is losing its grip on mankind.

Now, how would you say the Anti-Christian hordes ought to fight the enemy?
Instead of fighting within our own ranks, we should be teaming up against our true nemesis... Christianity!

Do you really believe an actual war against Christianity could be put into reality some fine day, other than in an individualistic level? Everybody speaks of it, but where's the war?
I don't know if an actual war will manifest, but I'll be ready if it does.

Is there anything positive aspects you might find in the Christian ideology? Anything at all?
Sure, it helps to herd the sheep together for the slaughter!

Do you hold an equal amount of wrath towards Judaism, Buddhism, Islam, and Hinduism as you do for Christianity?
Yes, they are all slave-religions.

I find particular interest in the fact that many Satanists stress the word "evil", and this goes for you, too. I thought you were far beyond "good" and "evil" that are nothing more than Christian terminology for Christian morals. Is this mere symbolism or are you really stuck in "evil"?
I only use the word "evil" as a Christian description of what they label me as being. I personally don't believe in "good" or "evil". Each person has his or her own interpretation of what "good" and "evil" are. I just have fun using a word Christians hate.

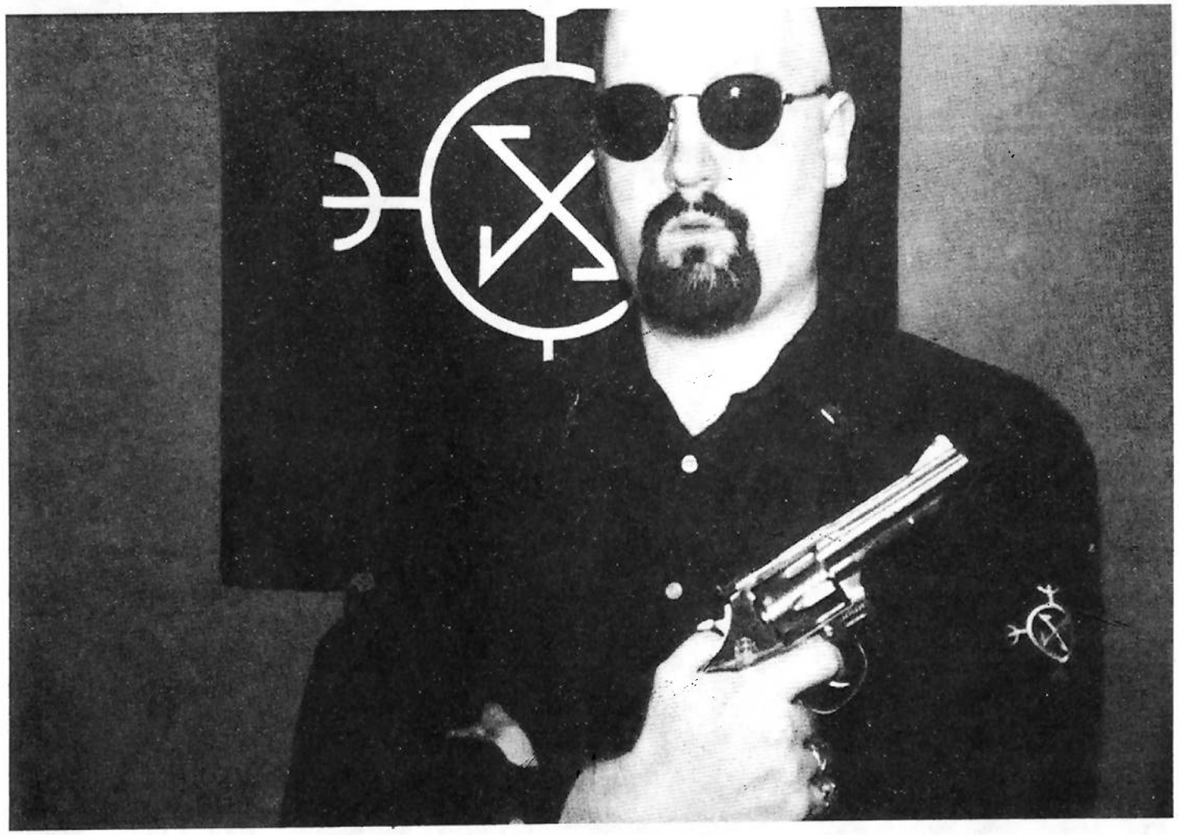
Your band, Acheron, is one of the oldest still existing Black Metal bands. With such experience, how would you view the ups and downs the whole genre has undergone?
I have always supported the Black & Death Metal scene, but I never wanted to confine Acheron to the ups and downs of the movement. I always did what I wanted to do, not what was "in" thing at the time. I really don't think the Black Metal scene has evolved very much. Sure there are a few bands helping to expand the music, but the majority of acts out today are drones and dupes of others in the scene. Black Metal will eventually burn itself out like the Death Metal scene did in the mid 90's. Trends destroy things, but maybe it will help to bring back the purity of the music. Sometimes things must die to be reborn.

One particularly intriguing individual in the States these days must be The Unabomber. He lived some decades deep in the forests of Montana in total hate against the industrial society and technology. He remorselessly stood on behalf of nature by sending out several letterbombs, resulting in a few deaths and numerous injuries. Have you read his manifesto "The Industrial Society & Its Future"? You can't say he doesn't have a point, can you?
He may have some interesting points, but letterbombs are a weak way of dealing with your enemy. I feel a person should have the guts to look his enemies in the eyes before killing them.

Is there anything you personally might fear?
Sure, but a true warrior would never expose these things to the public.

Okay, to wrap things up, if you had to put the whole life and existence of Vincent Crowley into a one single sentence, what would it be?
I have always made sure to live life to the fullest and follow my own instincts, while enjoying the fruits of sin. My tombstone will say: "He lived, died and returned to the earth".

USA truly is a cesspool, but luckily there are always exceptions manifesting the rules, and such manifest is Mr. Crowley by all means. Whatever you may think of the Church of Satan, it is still pretty much undeniable that our guest here belongs to those few living and breathing individuals who truly are of the very elite when seeing things from a perspective.



GYLVE NAGELL

"I have this specific feeling that when I die I will miss the life"

One of those few who really have seen it all twice must be Norwegian Gylve Nagell. Calling himself Fenriz, Gylve has gained a lot of recognition for the musical work he has been doing throughout the years. He is the driving force and leading figure behind Norwegian Black Metal music and his band, Darkthrone, is naturally the legend of the field.
Rumours circulate about a guy who's living in his black house with two lamps in the window, constantly shaggering on the edge of dream and reality.
While I was in Norway, I had to glance at those blackened eyes where only the darkest shadows dance.

We meet in a pub on Monday night. The place is called Elm Street, a rock cafe residing pretty much in the heart of Oslo, and it's known of carrying plenty of Black Metal people inside. The pub is relatively crowded, considering that it's a weekday. There is Gylve, at the back of the pub chatting with some suspicious looking fellows, who later on turned out to be members of Fleurety and Mayhem. Well-worn leatherjacket is accompanied with black jeans and boots, making an impression of a traditional Black Metal guy. "Are you..." I go and ask after having paid 33 NOK for one large and tasty Ringnes. Lighting his cigarette on a beer filled table, I'm given a rapid answer: "Yeah". Gylve gives quite a lively first impression. Repetatively he substantiates his statements with gestures. He keeps on reminding me about my unordinary line of questioning: "I've never been asked so many fundamental questions!" he goes and continues flatteringly enough: "You're the master of asking these questions". Life seems to be threating the man quite well at the moment, and that shows in his face, but also in these answers he gave me the night when fog was lying thick over the palace of god.

What are your values of life and would you rather die than break them?
There's nothing worth dying for.

Nothing?
It depends on the person. If you're a person who has nothing to live for, then a lot of things would be worth dying for. But right now I'm so pleased with my life that I don't think I would want to die for anything.

Not even for the things that make your life pleasant at the moment?

"At least if we have a lot of cool Satanists together there will also be a lot of cool things happening"

I don't think so. Whenever you lose something or if something is being taken away, you will find something else - at least if you're a person with the resources.

You have been more than productive with your musical and lyrical work throughout the years. Darkthrone have released 7 albums to date, not even to mention the countless project bands you have participated in like Storm, Valhall and Dodheimsgard for instance. Generally speaking, are you satisfied with what you have achieved in life so far?
Yes, actually I am, absolutely. I wouldn't want to be much more famous. The only thing I'd like to achieve now is a lot more inspiration and engagement for my musical work. You know, lately I have felt a bit lazy and uninspired, but obviously this is understandable as I have been so inspired for several years now. Ever since I was 15 years old I've been constantly working and doing a lot of music alongside this Darkthrone thing, so I truly think I'm in a period of life where I just want to relax and communicate with other people. I've done so many albums that I actually need to relax for a while. Everything's fine right now.

You just mentioned you have been working. Does this work have any sincere value to you?
The work has a lot of value. It has brought me many things and with the profits I have also been able to support my Satanism.

But living and working in today's society obviously enforces you to communicate and socialize with other people. And this brings up in my mind the early image of Darkthrone as an isolated and misanthropic group of extremities. So, are you or aren't you truly misanthropic?
I'm not philanthropic, but misanthropy means that you hate all sorts of people, and that's rather primitive because people are so different. Hating all human beings is more of a psychical thing than something you've concluded with thinking and pondering the relation of philanthrophy versus misanthrophy. It's clear though that I dislike a lot of the typical human behaviour. At the place I work, for instance, I never speak with the people there because they are all very normal. I like to speak with people who have the same preferences I have. The same kind of background and so on. I like to speak with more radical persons.

Radical in what sense?
Well, the persons who don't stick to the norms of everyone else. I think you know quite well what I mean with a very normal person...

Yes, indeed I do, but don't you then even feel utterly submissive and depressed working in this society which is solely run by these "normal" persons?
I'm not very easily depressed, but if I do get depressed, it's rather because of small, everyday things. It's so difficult to change this society. What I've been mostly doing is to try to change people's views about Christianity, but even though it's obvious Christians have too much influence in the society, it doesn't really depress me because they don't hurt me at all. I just feel uncomfortable with the fact that when you're born they put you right into the church-system. So, when you're older you have to make a choice, you have to bale out and you have leave the religion by yourself. Of course there are a lot of things I don't agree with this society, but no one agrees entirely with the way the society is working. You can ask any person in the planet and they will all say there's something wrong here and there's something wrong there, but I think has to be pretty bad before you're going to do something about it. So, like I said, it doesn't really depress me. With the Satanic art I'm doing I'm just trying to make people think twice about Christianity.

What would you say is the most pathetic aspect of Christianity?
Definitely the "sheep-thinking" - the fact that they need a leader all the time, a shepherd to tell them what to do.

You have quite openly labeled yourself a Satanist. There are many ways to interpret the essence of Satan, ranging from pure and primitive Goatworship into a more philosophistic form of belief. What's your conception?
Briefly said, it comes in layers. From being just against Christianity up to different kinds of worship. I look upon Satanism as utopic visions of hell, which is the thing I like to dream of the most. Satan can be a person, but I can't say I've seen Him. However, I don't stick to one form of Satanism at all because I'd like everyone to be more individualistic. Of course it's okay with all the Satanic cults, sects and groups, but I prefer to see Satanism in a lot of different ways. See it in the society, see it religiously...

So, your conception is religious to some extent?
I'd say so because if you, for instance, read a lyric that says some nice things about Satan, get moved and feel something special - that in itself is a religious feeling. If you take out the word "Satan" and put in "a fire truck" or "a bottle of milk" - you can't get the same feeling.

It's irritating how many "Satanists" don't comprehend the difference in between Satanism and typical Anti-Christian behaviour. You know, even if categorizing doesn't make much of a sense, a Satanist is necessarily an Anti-Christian whereas an Anti-Christian isn't necessarily a Satanist.

Yes, I agree, and I know there's a lot of difference in between the two. But if someone would ask me to choose I'd go: "Well, I like them both" because I wouldn't want to choose between Satanism and Anti-Christianity. This isn't a serious problem for me though. Even yesterday I talked with a Christian person and at least we have something more to discuss than if it was some stupid sportsguy who only cares about working overtime.

Yes, it's much better with a person who has "wrong" values than no values at all.
Well, yeah, but I still don't like what the person stands for, though at least we can discuss things and I can study this person to find out maybe a bit more how the Christian mind works, which is very interesting for me.

Indeed it is.
But I also understand people who are not interested in the religious aspects at all. As for myself, it's like I wrote in this one lyric: "When hell calls your name there's no way back".

You surely have fought against Christianity very conscientiously. Do you honestly believe this degenerated religion will see its end someday?
Well, if Christianity was to see its end, there would come just another same type of religion. They wouldn't call it Christianity, but it would be just the same anyway. A lot of people have done cool things in the name of Christ, like become rich on it. I think that's just brilliant, but they also make people act like idiots. For instance, I think some of the TV-preachers really mean what they say while some of them are just laughing at their expensive cars and homes. I'd like to do something easy and get rich on it as well.

Should our Anti-Christian hordes fight the enemy passively or actively?
It's difficult to say because if we walk around, scare everyone and burn churches, we will just make people Christian. Christianity is eating itself right now - at least in Norway. Several Christian leaders have been arrested for raping women and children. And now people read about this and go: "Wow, all this in the name of Christ!" and "We don't believe in Christianity anymore, we are starting to be more realistic".

Norway is generally looked upon as a country which strongly holds on to very fundamental Christian values and morals, so how do you like living in there?
All the cool people in Norway move to Oslo because the rest of the country is totally dominated by the Christian societies - total Christian societies, and these societies are really horrible. I want more promiscuousity. These Christian societies are always so extremely boring, straight and very narrow-minded, and I can't take that. It's so easy to see in Norway where Christianity or any other type of "nice" religion will eventually lead to and it's never anything I like, so this is another reason to hate Christianity. At least if we have a lot of cool Satanists together there will also be a lot of cool things happening.

What Norway as a whole means to you? You just mentioned...
Yeah, I just mentioned that there are a lot of places in Norway I'd like to send away because of their Christian extremity, and actually there are also a lot of other people here in Norway who think these places should definitely not be a part of the country. You know, it's mostly Oslo for me, but I think Norway as a whole is a very nice country even though it still could be better. The Norwegian nature is also another aspect why I'm so fond of Norway. Of course there are a lot of other nice places in the world, but I happen to live here and everything works for me very well right now.

What sort of feelings the grim and majestic landscapes awake in your soul?
[laughs] "Uh!" - that sort of feeling. Usually when I see some nice looking nature I always go: "Uh!" - you know, all out in the air, typical Black Metal gesture.

Would you say nature is the source of all life?
Yeah, but I don't think about these things very much. Where did life start? How did it begun? Why are we here? I don't think it's "deep" to think these things at all, I just think it's a waste of time because we actually are here now, you know. I don't want to find any higher meanings about why we are on this planet, but then again, if you ask me next week, then I might be interested. That's the kind of person I am. I never have the same viewpoints for a long period of time. Anything can happen. Always ready for anything to happen.

Darkthrone have always withdrawn

"I often go to museums to check out the latest exhibitions of contemporary art. People who just like sports and cars look at this art like: 'What is this shit? I could have done that in three minutes.'"

"There are a lot of things I don't agree with this society, but no one agrees entirely with the way the society is working. You can ask any person in the planet and they will all say there's something wrong here and there's something wrong there, but I think it has to be pretty bad before you're going to do something about it."

from politics. Do you, Gylve, have any personal political views concerning Norway?
I've been voting just about everything from the left-wing to the right-wing, so it's a chaos because I can't follow entirely any political party since there are always plenty of things I disagree with all of them. I don't have so many political views because I find it very difficult for me to change anything, and you say: "Well, you can just go and vote", but it doesn't do much. If I was politically interested I'd try to get more people to vote for the party I was going to vote, but I don't see any party to follow, so there you have it, I'm not politically interested.

Black Metal people are known of constantly wearing black clothes. What does the colour black in itself represent to you?
Black is the sign of danger for Christian people. Just like the colour red is used in normal society to point out something as dangerous. And since we use the colour black in Black Metal as well, then why not? It's important not to start wearing green, it'd be just silly. It's natural to wear black as it works in the system, so we must continue with this black shit.

Black Metal is the most extreme form of art. Are you capable of loving any other sort of art like paintings or sculptures, for instance?
If I had the gift of painting I'd paint some abstract and symbolic things like visions of hell. I often go to museums to check out the latest exhibitions of contemporary art. People who just like sports and cars look at this art like: "What is this shit? I could have done that in three minutes". This is the kind of art I like to watch. I like art which has a message. Same thing with music. Music without message is pointless. I know it from experience because sometimes I play in a band which has no message, and every time there's a new album coming out I'm not very eager to hear it. There's always a message in my personal work, but I still can enjoy music and paintings from other people which has no strong symbolic meaning.

Anyone who have had the chance to get oriented in the Satanic poetry represented in the Darkthrone albums could say your talent as a poet is indispensable. Could you improvise something here?
Actually I'm not a very poetic person. I read a lot, but I read no poetry, so therefore it's not easy for me to say a poem just like that. If I had read a lot of poetry, then I'd be able to throw here a lot of clichés that I know would work out. The lyrics I write take plenty of time to search for.

Which one of your lyrics is the closest to your black heart?
"Under a Funeral Moon"

Many of your lyrics associate with the theme of life and death. How do you relate to the topic in real life?
I think about death 10 to 60 times a day. I don't necessarily want to think about it, but it just comes all the time. I have no need to die right now because I have this specific feeling that when I die I will miss the life. It's like your house and everything you own just burns down, and that's something to miss I'd say. But I do think there are things to be gain by death. You lose the life, but it makes sense you'll find something else.

Would you care to be immortal?
I could handle it, but the negative aspect of immortality is the lack of choice. It's the same thing as with being imprisoned - you don't have a choice. When I was a child and did something "wrong" I had to stay grounded the rest of the day. It didn't really matter as I usually spent my days in the room anyway, but when I was grounded I had no choice anymore. And then it became horrible. When you're immortal you can't choose death, and after every passing minute and every passing year you'd become more and more curious about what is death. You

"I think about death 10 to 60 times a day.
I don't necessarily want to think about it, but it just comes all the time."

couldn't choose it, but you'd be fascinated by it anyway. Death is exciting - it's the unknown. People are always afraid of the unknown."

Some people choose suicide to end the earthly misery, and there's been plenty of rumours about you killing yourself, too...
I've been suicidal once. It was just a moment, like snapping your fingers, and it was gone. I didn't do anything to myself. Like I said, I'm not easily depressed and I'm actually not suicidal at all. I like to drink beer alright, but this is not to drink beer. I like beer because it leads to conversations and of course I also like the taste of it. Cigarettes, too. But this has nothing to do with suicide or any special mental condition - oh no, this is just a way of life. Still, if you're anti-suicidal, you have no life at all. You wouldn't do anything because you'd be afraid of even walking down the stairs.

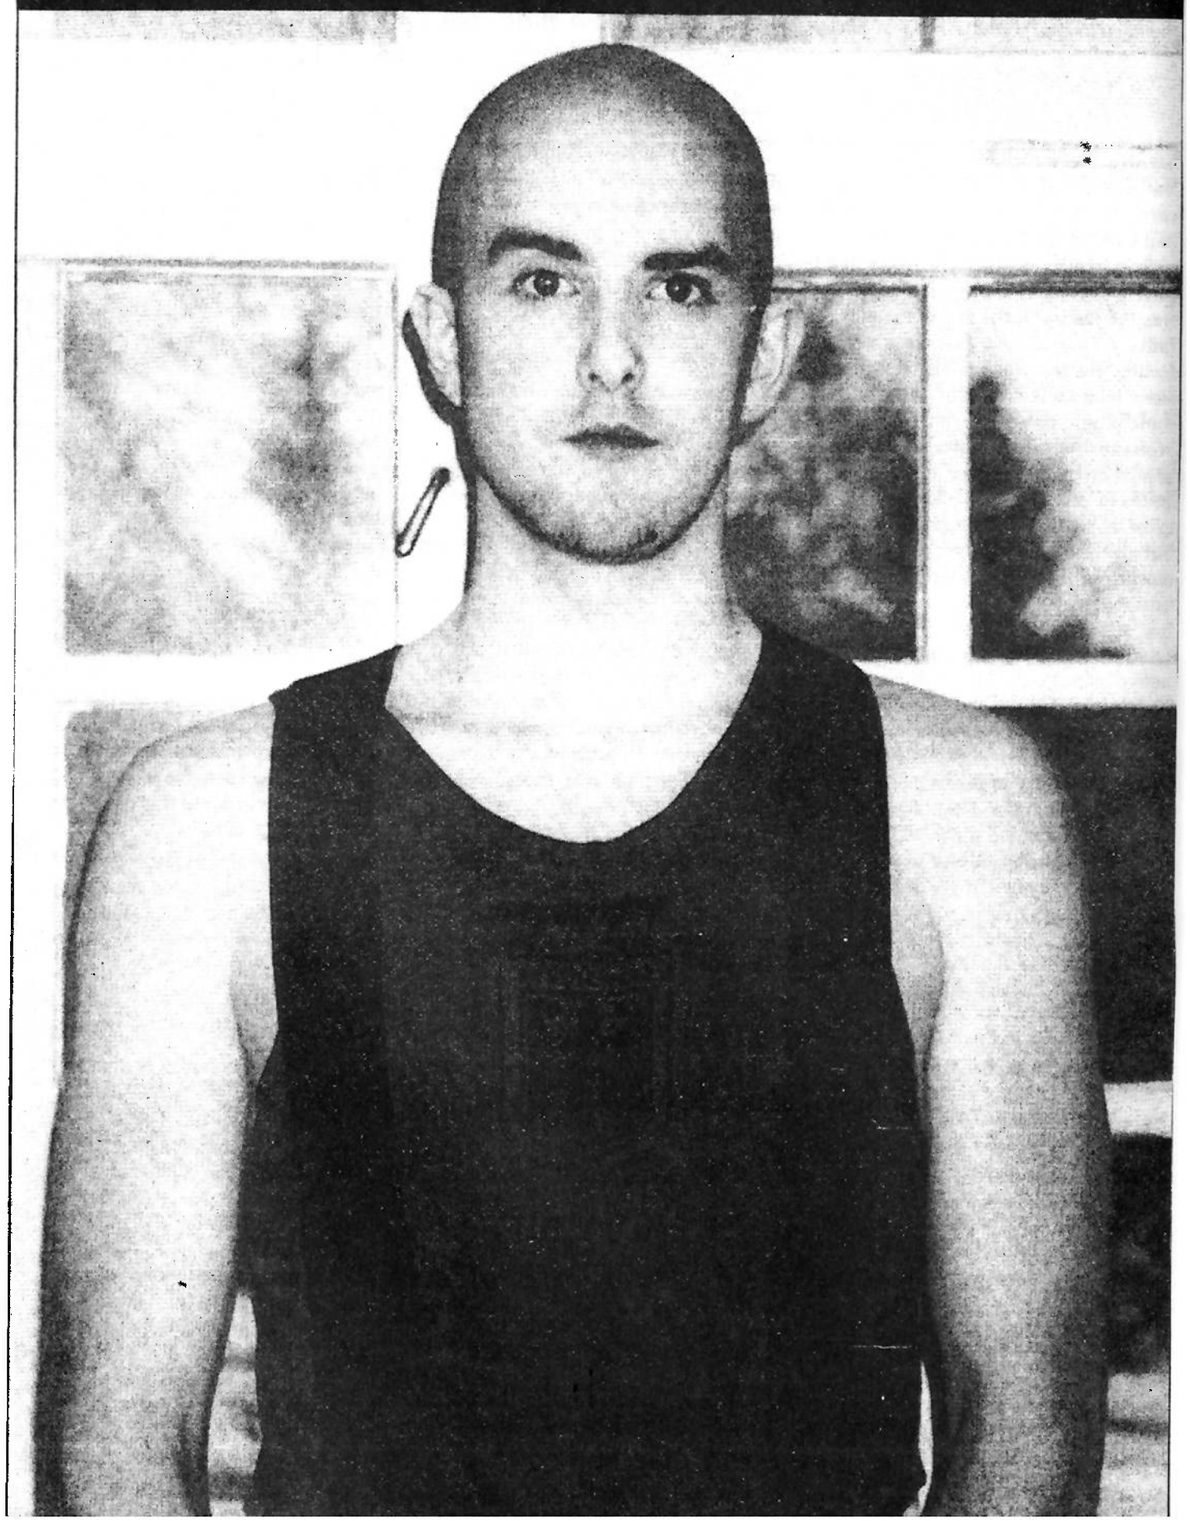
You might fall, you know. There would be no movement and if there's no movement, there's no life at all. So what's the point in being anti-suicidal?

Okay, to wrap things up, if you had to put the whole life and existence of Gylve Nagell into a one single sentence, what would it be?
"With my art I am the fist in the face of god", and on the gravestone it will say: "With his art he was a fist in a face of god".

We have reached the end of our discussion. Gylve reminds me: "What I gave you here was pretty basic stuff. I don't think I would change so many of these views." I have to say I secretly admire his honesty. The world outside is so filled up with all sorts of wanna be's that it is a great pleasure to finally meet someone who just wants to be himself and do things that feel alright. Maybe it's hard for the look-I-coloured-my-hair-black-yesterday type of Black Metal people to admit that this very relaxed and individualistic individual is also pretty much responsible for what we came to understand as "Black Metal" in the 90s, not some demon possessed creature acting "evil" all the time. This is just life, you know. Well, anyway, he is the master of Satanic art - always was and always will be, and now it's time to put "Under a Funeral Moon" on the player and let the darkest shadows dance to resurrect the nightly memories and pleasant reveries.

VARG VIKERNES

"I just wait for the time I can charge into a storm of steel!"



There is very little left to be said about this last guest in here. Varg Vikernes, or alternatively Count Grishnackh, was a name that terrorized whole Scandinavia some years back and anyone following the media in recent years knows the story of this modern heathen.
But the past is nothing compared to the future. Varg Vikernes is marching stronger than ever before with his Allgermanische Heidnische Front to wipe out the Christian plague for once and for all. This time even more organized. This time even more serious. This time till the very end.

My first touch to Varg Vikernes and Burzum dates back to 1992, as was the case with many others, I reckon. Never had I heard music carried out with such extremity as Burzum. Never had I been intrigued by a person as much as was the case with the mysterious fantasy figure Count Grishnackh. The feeling was just there. This feeling of something undescribingly powerful, something that was playing on the edge of dream and reality, literally. Years passed one after another and the cult status of Count Grishnackh just kept growing stronger, as a musician, yes, but all the way more as a person of the most extreme kind. Churches were burned, graves were desecrated, humans were killed and with international TV programs, newspapers as well as hundreds of underground publications making coverages, the legend of the infamous Count was immortalized. The first time I personally interviewed Varg Vikernes was in late 1994, and the second conversation followed in late 1995. Trying to track him down from all the different slammers of Norway was not always that easy as he was and still is being frequently transferred from one prison to another. There were times it seemed almost impossible to have him interviewed as the prison authorities sent back one request for interview after another, and neither was desperate phone calls of any sincere value, really. But nothing lasts forever, and finally I was able to debate with the bloodthirsty wolf again who seems to be getting more and more violent with every passing year inside, to put it mildly. Feel the mighty jaws sucking your throat, now!

What are your values of life and would you rather die than break them?
I would rather die than give up fighting for what I believe in. However, I think it is okay to break some principles when opposed to "the enemy". When opposed to an enemy who only fights with dishonourable means, it is okay to fight back with the same means. Unfortunately that is the only way to fight them. I treat others like they treat me. Do they fight me with honourable means, I fight back with the same honourable means. If they do not, I won't either.

You have been in prison over half a decade now. Do you think all this has strenghtened and developed you as an individual?
It has been a test to my self-discipline, and it has forced me to develop. Nobody is made to sit alone in a cell year out and year in. Either You develop in such situations or You perish. Also, prison is a very primitive environment with a lot of primitive individuals who respect nothing but physical strenght. When forced to live in an environment where the survival of the fittest is the only law, it is natural to grow physically stronger as well. For people with an attitude - like me - this is especially important, and true. Briefly said, I am stronger, both physically and mentally, more self-disciplined and of course more experienced. I have had time to read some books as well, leaving me more educated.

What would you say are the biggest advantages and disadvantages of being imprisoned?
Advantages? Well, there are none. If You are some broke looser it can be an advantage to get free food, lodging and of course the "forced education", but in general I would say there are no advantages from being in prison to being "free". The biggest disadvantage must be the isolation-effect. It is impossible to communicate with the world outside other than by letter, and even all such contact is controlled by the authorities.

You have been once again transferred. How come?
This time because they thought I had plans to break out. Some Pakistanis who felt threatened spread some rumours to get me sent to another prison. It is all nonsense, really.

Are you in isolation now?
I was in isolation for a month, but then I was sent to yet another prison and now I can socialize with the other inmates for about an hour a day in the yard.

In spite of your imprisonment, you have had a very eventful life. You have enjoyed great success with Burzum, written a book and been an international "celebrity" to some extent. How do you personally look upon your past today?
It is nothing compared to the future.

Burzum, like yourself, has withdrawn completely from the boundaries of Black Metal ideology. Still, it is obvious there are some people following you from the gloriful days of Count Grishnackh to this day. What is your message to them?
What is "Black Metal ideology"? There is no such a thing, unless You call cowardism and passivity an ideology, which seems to be the ideology of most "Black Metallers". Anyway, I have nothing to say to the early listeners. The days of Count Grishnackh were not gloriful, by the way. They were days of poverty, hunger, despair and a lot of hard work. Everything was wasted because of clowns like Tomas Haugen and Euronymous. Everything good has been done after the latter one was killed. His death made room for constructive work in the milieus!

How do you relate to the topic of churchburning today? The aforementioned Tomas Haugen and the others who went down for it earlier on have criticized the whole phenomenon with rather strong arguments.
Tomas Haugen of Emperor is a wimp, a police informer and a nobody. Like some others, he joined a company who set fire to a church. He did not take the initiative to do it, he just followed the "crowd". He has probably never believed in fighting Judeo-Christianity in the first place. Like all weaklings, he talks against acting, and even reacting, because he is afraid it might force himself to act or react. I say SMASH the wimps, OBLITERATE Judeo-Christianity in all forms and manifestations! And I say that because I know I have the guts to both act and react against everything put up against me by "the enemy".

The essence of Burzum was in the beginning the total destruction of Christianity in Scandinavia. Is it still the same?
Yes, and Burzum is still not Black Metal!

You have said no longer to listen to any metal music at all including Immortal and Darkthrone, the bands whose members you once refered to as brothers. Are you in touch with them anymore or have your paths seperated for good?
I correspond with Fenriz, but not much. They have other interests than I have, so I see no point in staying in touch with them.

The latest Burzum album "Daudi Baldrs" is based upon the story of Balder's life and death in Norse mythology. Can you identify yourself with the story to any extent?
Well, this story has nothing to do with me personally. It is all about what happened to our race when Balder (the meaning of life) was killed as Judeo-Christianity was forced upon us. When Balder was buried, his wife Nanna (nearness - between people) died from a grief and was buried, or better yet - burned, with him. Also, an unfortunate dwarf got in the way of Thor as he was about to hail the dead, so - in anger - Thor kicked the dwarf onto the fire as well, killing him. The dwarf's name was Lit (trust)...
Today we have lost our meaning of life, which rests in our subconsciousness, and nearness and trust between us are gone. Not until after Ragnarok, when Balder returns, will we get any of these things back!

As much as you have done to promote the thought patterns of the pagan past, it might be reality the modern people of today will never open their eyes to the truth. Does this frustrate you?
We must make sure that their eyes are opened in some way then. If they won't open their eyes, we will do it for them! "Odin is to fight and to NEVER give up" as P.A. Munch said it. It is pointless to be frustrated. It is waste of energy and time.

Are you misanthropic due to the superficiality of the common man?
Yes. I hate lazy people, stupid people, inactive people and so on. In a way I hate everybody alive. If they are alive, they cannot possibly be willing to die for what they believe in, right? I just wait for the time when I can charge into a storm of steel! Right now that is not possible. So - patience!

You seem to be interested in the history of war and especially the World War II. Are there any particularly glorious events or armies that have stuck in your mind?
If we concentrate on our century, I will point at three impressive armies. First of all the German army during the Second World War was incredible. The Japanese fought very bravely in the pacific and the Finns fought very well in the Winter War as well as later during the attack on Russia. However, we can hardly call any of these three nations as victorious. Finland capitulated and even declared a war on Germany. Germany was utterly destroyed, and Japan as well. Still, the Second World War was a very good demonstration of the Aryan man's abilities in war, and the Shinto-Japanese's as well. Victory is not that important I think, as long as the fight is good.

What about the best leaders?
The best leader must be Adolf Hitler.
The worst one must be Franco.

The Third Reich probably could have been established worldwidely if Hitler had not been so anxious with his thirst for world domination. The attack to Russia was put to reality at too early point and thus it was more or less doomed to fail.
It was pretty suicidal to attack Russia alright, but it would have been even more suicidal not to do so. Russia had 3 000 000 men along the Russo-German border. They had over 30 000 tanks and also 4500 tanks to guard against Japan. The entire Russian airforce was placed along the border as well, which in itself is a proof that Stalin intended to attack Germany. Anybody familiar with military strategy knows that it is not very "defensive" to line up all the aircrafts along the border. Such placement of force is aggressive strategy and nothing else. Stalin was building up his forces because he intented to attack Germany. Hitler understood this and attacked Russia before Stalin could build up too much. The attack was not doomed to fail, as you put it, but it became pretty risky when Mussolini suddenly attacked Greece without consultation with Hitler first. "Barbarossa" was then delayed some weeks because Hitler had to save Mussolini from DEFEAT when Greece drove the Italians back into Albania and when the Great Britain planned a "coup d' état" in Jugoslavia. Germany smashed both Jugoslavia and Greece in a couple of weeks, but unfortunately these weeks proved to be fatal for the German army in Russia when the winter came. They were only days away from Moscow when the winter came and halted the assault. If Mussolini had not attacked Greece the Germans would have reached Moscow in good time before winter. Had Moscow fallen, it is most likely that the rest of Russia would have fallen as well. If You want to criticize anybody for the defeat of Germany, criticize Franco for not taking Gibraltar. Criticize Mussolini for attacking Greece. Criticize Italy, Vichy-France, Rumania and Bulgaria for producing poor soldiers. Criticize the Norwegian government for their failure to stay neutral in the conflict as they did nothing when the British raided a German ship in the neutral Norwegian waters. Criticize Japan for not attacking Russia when Germany did. Criticize Sweden for not joining the Germans. You can also criticize the Finns, as the Finnish soldiers lost quality the moment they treaded on Russian soil. As You might know, You Finns saw the war as a war to liberate Your own territories, not to conquer Russia, right?

Yes, that's right.
The only part You cannot criticize is

"The racially Aryan man with a Jewish soul and spirit, like Christians, are Anti-Humans who deserve nothing but a bullet in the back of the head."

Hitler and the German people who produced the best soldiers ever to walk on this earth up to date. People who kept the moral all the way in spite of suffering from everything. From starvation and terror-bombing to You-name-it. I say Heil Deutschland and Heil Hitler! I am proud to be Germanic when I read the history of Germany!

What do you think of Hitler as a person?
Hitler never really got the chance to fulfill his dreams with the Third Reich as aggressive neighbours were on all sides. However, considering the time he ruled, he did a great job for Germany. I don't think of Hitler as a person, really. What he did is what matters.

Hitled used the name "Wolf" of himself and so do you. Is this a sole coincidence?
There is no connection between Hitler's Wolf and my name in this context.

Many people have misunderstood Nietzsche, including Hitler who comprehended the spiritual Übermensch as purely racial. Have you personally read any of Nietzsche and how fully do you share his viewpoints?
Who told You that Hitler interpreted Nietzsche's Übermensch as "purely racial"? This is not right! I have read some of Nietzsche's books, yes, and I agree with most of what he says. I share his views on women as well as his views on Judeo-Christianity. His description of the blonde and blue-eyed Aryans as slaves in a cage made by Jewish "virtues" is very good. Also, when he says that the Übermensch has no need for revenge, I agree. That does not mean that one shall not "punish" wrongdoers, but it means You shall not do it to revenge something, rather for practical reasons. Like as if someone rapes a child, do not kill him to revenge the act but kill him to remove the unhealthy element in our people! Same result, different motive! Anyway, I have read only "Antichrist", "Also sprach Zarathustra" and "Jenseits von Gut und Böse", so I cannot claim to know his theories and views fully. That is at least not all of them.

How is your own warcompany Allgermanische Heidnische Front doing? Still expanding?
The A.H.F. is still expanding. Besides the Norsk Hedensk Front (Postboks 160, 5049 Sansli) we have a Front in Sweden (Svensk Hednisk Front, c/o Mattias Lövbrand, Svingelstigen 1, 95 435 Gammelstad), in Germany (D.T.B., Postfach 100947, 99019 Erfurt), in Flandern/Belgium (Vlaams Heidens Front, c/o Jürgen Suys, Rietstraat 67, 9320 Erembodegem) and soon on Iceland as well (Islenska Heidni Fylkingin, P.O. Box 53, 810 Hveragerdi). We have some websites (www.propatria.org/shf, www.propatria.org/vhf and www.ariskkamp.com/shf), and everything is going fine at the time being.
We seek to enlight the masses, to open their eyes for the truth, and make them be something else than what they are today! To achieve this goal we have to appeal to the archtypes of our blood, and those archtypes are our Pagan Gods and Goddesses!

What do you expect from those recruited to A.H.F.?
The will to fight for Wotan and our race. Loyalty to our Germanic nature.

It is often envisioned of which elements and aspects of society we must destroy, yet, hardly ever it is envisioned what would we create if the chance was granted upon us. So, what kind of world order would you and A.H.F. offer to replace the now prevailing system?
One that is in harmony with nature. As simple as that.

What does this nature actually mean to you?
Nature is the body of Mother Earth, a wife of Wotan. She is holy to us, and shall be treated with respect and care for as long as she lives!

Do you respect and value an animal, which is after all just fulfilling its natural needs, higher than the man of today - this modern, unnatural, Christianized, overbreeding, degenerated, morally raped person?
The Aryan man is on top of the hierarchy. The racially Aryan man with a Jewish soul and spirit, like Christians, are Anti-Humans who deserve nothing but a bullet in the back of the head. However, they can be saved, so they are "potentially worthy humans"...

You have said to support technologically advanced society. Why? Isn't technology in itself unnatural?
There is no need to destroy fruits of time just because people misuse this fruit today. Technology is no problem, but too many people misusing technology is a problem. Our Nationalsocialist order is built on a total understanding of nature, both of our human nature as well as of Mother Earth herself. We fight for a "Green Europe, for White People", to put it that way. The rotten, Judeo-Christian, capitalist pig-system of today rapes our Mother Earth, and does its best to profit from her, without any thought for her wellbeing, or for the wellbeing of the people to come. However, that has nothing to do with technology, it is rather the modern mentality that need to be exterminated. This Archjewish quest for gold in our "modern" society is the real problem, not technology.

"In a way I hate everybody alive."

Will we ever be able to glance at the Northern nightsky as free individuals? Free of the Christian laws, morals, values, restrictions and symbols. Free of this enslaving society these same Christians desecratingly built upon our very soil.
Yes, but only if more people join us in our fight for the TRUE light! The Light of Wotan!

Okay, to wrap things up, if you had to put the whole life and existence of Varg Vikernes into a one single sentence, what would it be?
Gelobt sei, was hart macht!

There you have it. Much have been written about this individual and, without even slightest shadows of doubt, much more will be written in the future. The saga of Varg Vikernes and Allgermanische Heidnische Front continues right down to the history books - mark my word. Just draw your weapons and choose your sides. Take it or leave it. WAR!

Reality Time

There are a lot of theories about the origin of our race. Some are just wrong, but there is one that is not only wrong; the British-Israel theory. This theory claims that we - the European peoples - are the "true" tribes of Israel, and that we therefore are the "true God's chosen people".

This theory is propagated by the Aryan Nations, the KKK, and by other organisations. For any person with the slightest knowledge in history this theory is nothing but a bad joke, and it will make any sensible person feel disgust. They claim WE - the proud European peoples - are "the true Israelites". What is their problem?

Let's first look for the origin of this theory. The first well-known person to believe in this was Richard Wagner, and the fact that he believed in it was the reason for his quarrels with the famous philosopher F.W. Nietzsche, which terminated their friendship. Wagner claimed Jesus was an Aryan, and used that as an excuse to believe in "God" and to be Christian. Both, Wagner and Nietzsche, were Anti-Semites, but while Nietzsche took the consequence of his Anti-Semitism and thus spurned everything Christian, Wagner twisted the truth by claiming Jesus was an Aryan, and not a Jew, and in that way he could stay Christian without being too Jewish - so to speak.

As You might know Christianity is a Jewish faith, with it's roots in the Jewish mythology, presented to us through the bible. This is an indisputable fact. The origin, the vast majority of the writers, the characters, everything in the bible is Jewish - and/or fictional (like Moses and Abraham). The biggest victory the Jews have ever achieved was making our European peoples Christian. Like a Rabbi said it in Century Magazine in the twenties; "We have thrown Your culture of the road, and replaced it with our culture. Our God. Our faith. Our laws. We have made You agents of our people". This was in an article titled "A real case against the Jews". I haven't read the Century Magazine, but I saw this quote from the Century Magazine in an SS-schoolbook.

Nietzsche wrote in his book titled "Anti-Christ" that; "The Jews have through their work made humanity so thoroughly false that even a Christian can feel Anti-Jewish today, without being aware of the fact that he himself is THE MOST EXTREME JEWISH CONSEQUENCE!" Instead of dissociating themselves from this Jewish fable, they cling to it with an extreme fanatism. Instead of taking the consequence of the fact that their faith is Jewish from the core and all the way out, they do everything they can to convince themselves that it is "really" Aryan, and that THEY are the "true God's chosen people", that the Jews have "stolen" THEIR faith and THEIR heritage.

Their "proof" that WE are the "true Israelites", and not the Jews, are many. I will present one of these "proofs" to You here, to make You understand how ignorant this theory is.

They claim the European peoples are the twelve lost tribes of Israel. Since one of these tribes were called Dan, they concluded that Denmark (Danmark in most Germanic languages) got it's name after that tribe. Okay, that sounds reasonable - if You lack any knowledge about history whatsoever. Well, like most Europeans I do not, so I will tell You the truth about the name of Denmark. Before Denmark became Denmark, it was called only Fyn, Jylland and Sjaelland - being the names of the different landmasses we now called Denmark.

In the Viking Age the Norse tribes fought against the Christians. The first to fall was Denmark. When Denmark then became Christianized, they started to send missionaries and priests to Pagan Norway and Sweden. The Danes were known to us as Skjoldungar (Children of Skjold, a son of Wotan), but we then started to call them Danes - as that was what they were. For anybody who happen to know Norse, or happen to have a Norse dictionary, like myself, it is not difficult to find out that Dan means "churchlord". In other words we - the Swedes and the Norwegians - called them Churchlords as they tried to bring their Church to our lands! That is how the Skjoldungar became the Danes! Their lands then became the "Churchlord-fields" (Danmark). This was in the late Viking Age.

In other words Denmark does not have ANYTHING to do with this Israelite tribe called Dan, it has a very obvious, and for educated Europeans, well-known origin.

This leads us to our next question; who are they who spread the British-Israel theory? I have mentioned Wagner, a great German composer! Also there have been some British or Scottish nobles who have claimed THEY were the "true God's chosen people", but today there are no nobles or Aryan composers who claim to be of "God's chosen people". Today there are only Americans and a handful of "not-very-educated" Europeans who claim this.

Let's then ask; who are the Americans? What is their origin? Okay, they come from Europe, from all of Europe actually (I am talking about the white Americans here). That is common knowledge, but what is not that known is that those who emigrated to America were A); extreme, brainwashed, Judeo-Christian sects who were persecuted in Europe, B); the poorest and least resourceful of the lower classes, C); outcasts, and of course D); adventurers, E); second-born Young men (who would not inherit the farms or businesses from their parents when they die because they had a big brother), and F); "others". In Norway some towns and villages collected money, so that they could afford a ticket for the scum in the town to America, and so that they got rid of them.

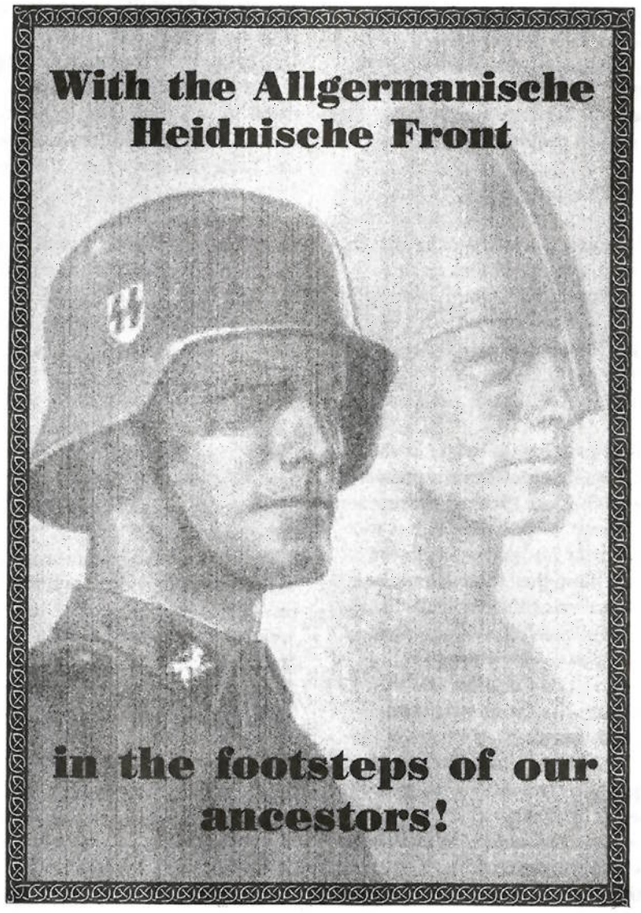
So to my point; are we going to listen to these people or are we going to listen to what Adolf Hitler, Nietzsche, Himmler, Bormann, Goebbels, and not least OUR PAGAN FOREFATHERS said?

Adolf Hitler stated, in 1940, that he would; "Exterminate Christianity in Germany, lock, stock, and barrel, with all its roots and branches". Heinrich Himmler stated under a speech in Zagreb the 3rd of August 1941 that; "Those who swear (loyalty) to the Hakenkreuz (the Swastika) must hate all other crosses and fight them!" Martin Bormann stated in 1942 that; "National-Socialist and Christian opinions are incompatible". Rudolf Hess stated that Germany intended to do away with Christianity as being only a Jewish fable (he said this on the 13th of July 1941), and so on. Adolf Hitler himself commented on the theory that Jesus was an Aryan and that the bible was "really" Aryan like this; "It does not matter if we talk about the new or the old testament, or about Jesus' words, it is all the same Jewish caboodle. It is madness to present Jesus as an Aryan".

So the obvious question will be; how dare You call me and my people "Israelites"? How dare You call Adolf Hitler an "Israelite"? How dare You spit on my culture, my people, my race, and everything else I love!? We are the people and the race of Wotan! Our culture is tens of thousands of years old, so how dare You - with Your degenerate, 300-years old, Judeo-Christian Capitalist Pig-"culture" - to even speak of "racial pride"? As long as You have Your Jewish faith You are Artificial Jews, and You shall be treated accordingly!

The British-Israel theory is thus not only wrong, it is also contraeffective and extremely dangerous. It starts when they symbolically murder their children during baptizement. They symbolically drown the Pagan man, and bring him back to life by "shouting out" the name of the Jewish soul that shall replace the Pagan soul! Oh yeah; You didn't know that? That baptizement is all about murdering the Pagan man, resurrecting him as an Artificial Jew? Well, You know now! So You better wake up from Your Jewish sleep, and start to fight for the truth, like our forefathers did, like the Third Reich did! Like WE do! Heil Wotan!



The Swedes and the Norwegians in the area around Trondheim belong to Yngvi-Frey's tribe. The Norwegians and the Swedes in Baahuslän, as well as the Icelanders, belong to Saeming's tribe. The Danes and the Swedes in Skåne belong to Skjold's tribe. The Germans belong to Volung's tribe, and so on. That's REALITY! Yngvi-Freyr (known as Ing to some), Saemingr, Skjold, Volung, and so on were all sons of Wotan! THAT is our origin! We are the Aryan tribes of Atlantis! Heil Wotan!

Fight the lies, and join us in the fight for the truth! Wake up brothers and sisters! Wake up and follow the call of Wotan; follow the voice of Your blood, of Your heart! It will not lie to You, like humans do. Heil, Heil, Heil Wotan!
